Farm Bloc Saves Face

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

On a vote of 62 to 23, the Senate yesterday decided to keep the controversial Bankhead parity price bill alive and use it to enforce the idea that economic stabilization means wage control as well as price control.

By getting the measure sent back to committee "for further study," the farm bloc saved its face as far as the country's inflation battle is concerned—and kept the President from winning a clear-cut veto victory asked in a lengthy message last week.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama, who led the "strategic retreat" when it became evident the veto could not be overridden, served notice that if the Administration permits wage increases and other inflationary factors to thrive, the bill will be rushed out for another show of strength.

WLB Report Demanded

Implementing the bloc's thoughts on wage control, Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia followed the Senate vote by introduction of a resolution to require submission by the War Labor Board of monthly statements on its decisions granting wage increases and reclassification of employes.

"The simplest, fairest and only effective course is to freeze prices on everything," the Virginian declared, "providing for equitable adjustments in hardship cases."

Under provisions of the resolution, passage of which will be sought tomorrow, Senator Byrd said, the WLB would give its first report to the Senate by May 1 and make statements monthly thereafter.

The material furnished would give reasons why each increase was granted and present a complete analysis of its effects. A special statement would need to be made concerning "departures from the 'Little Steel' formula."

Pace Bill Hearings

Hearings on the Pace bill to force farm labor costs into the agricultural parity price formula—a companion piece to the Bankhead measure—will begin this morning before the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Price Administrator Prentiss Brown and Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard have promised to be "present on the dot." Both failed to show up as witnesses Tuesday, when it appeared veto of the Bankhead bill would be sustained and the Pace bill thereby kicked out the window.

OPA has said the Pace measure would raise food costs 14 per cent and the other 7 per cent.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, asking the Senate to refer the Bankhead bill to committee, said he would vote to sustain the veto "if that was the vote before us."

He would do so, he declared, to prevent the President having the alibi Congress had not upheld his hand in a stabilization program.

"Dangerously Tolerant"

"Too often the President has been dangerously tolerant in his dealings with inflationary subjects. Unfortunately the controls are in his hands. I shall leave the responsibility with him," he said.

Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, who had led the move to recommit the Pace bill to committee, declared the Bankhead bill would help bring parity to corn

Shifting Labor Seen Periling Shipping Goal

Big Turnover Hits West Coast Hardest; Poor Housing Cited

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The Nation's goal of 18 million tons of new shipping by the end of the year is menaced by high rates of turnover in the shipbuilding industry, the Maritime Commission disclosed yesterday.

The commission reported that the industry suffered a deficit of 70,000 workers during the first quarter of this year, with labor turnover nationally reaching the unusually high rate of 11.2 per cent a month. A turnover rate of only 2 per cent can be attributed to withdrawal of men to enter the armed services, the commission said.

The situation is worst on the Pacific Coast, with 122,378 out of a nationally needed total of 200,000 workers required in the first quarter as replacements.

"The situation is so critical as to indicate that it is imperative to reverse the current manpower trend if we are to insure the completion of the scheduled program on time," Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, vice chairman of the Commission,

Congress Recess Of 2 Weeks May Begin April 17

Capitol leaders yesterday drew a circle around April 17, a week from Saturday, as the tentative date for starting a two-week recess, but made clear that members will have to work for such vacation.

House Majority Leader McCormack (Democrat) of Massachusetts, reported the tentative vacation deadline on the floor. A formal resolution to adjourn over Easter was being considered.

Night sessions, however, may be needed to clean up a collection of urgent bills, if the vacation is to start, according to House Majority Whip Ramspeck (Democrat) of Georgia. Among the bills are the District Legislative and Agriculture appropriation bills.

Big Job Ahead

By Roland Nicholson
Post Staff Writer

While President Roosevelt was selling a $25 war bond to a veteran Negro messenger at the White House, Washington yesterday continued to mobilize its resources for the greatest financial transaction in history—the forthcoming Second War Loan Drive, during which the Nation will be asked to buy 13 billion dollars of Government securities.

Both Lions and Rotary Clubs set up their selling organization for the campaign, and Samuel Gompers Masonic Lodge announced that it expected to sell $100,000 or more worth of bonds at a dinner dance in the Hotel Statler tonight.

"Small Cross-Section"

The drive opens April 12 and runs through the rest of the month, but the White House ceremony, with Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and others present, served to get the campaign off to a head start.

After hearing from Morgenthau details of the drive, the President said: "This is just a small cross-section of the White House staff, but this is like a great many other American houses throughout the country. Most of us have got some member of the family in the fighting forces of the United States.

"And we back home are trying to do our bit, too. We subscribe. If I might paraphrase the slogan of this new drive to maintain the war and turn out more things for our troops at the front line, the slogan is for us: They give their lives. We lend our money."

D. C. Quota 70 Million

As the Chief Executive stopped speaking, John H. Pye, who has been at the White House ever since Mr. Roosevelt has and who served him as chauffeur when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, stepped forward with $18.75 to buy his bond. Two stenographers bought a bond each, with Mr. Roosevelt taking the money and handing it to Morgenthau.

Washington's quota in the drive is 70 million dollars, of which the

Move to Revive Pay-as-Earn Gains in House

Doughton to Assent If Committee Votes To Resubmit Plans

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Pressure for speedy revival of pay-as-you-earn tax legislation gained strong support among House Democrats yesterday, and Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina said it would be all right with him if his committee voted to return the tax issue to the House.

"I'm not stubborn," Chairman Doughton remarked. He indicated that he would place before the committee an informal petition being circulated among House Democrats calling for a chance to vote on various compromises that were lost last week in the parliamentary shuffle, wherein all pay-as-you-earn tax proposals were sent back from the House to the Ways and Means Committee.

Petition Gains Support

Whether the committee would vote to return the tax issue to the House was an open question. Its members have shown scant inclination to adjust the main issue of income tax "forgiveness" that divided both the committee and the House, despite demands for a compromise, or a withholding collection system to bring in present income taxes.

Representative Anderson (Democrat) of New Mexico told his colleagues shortly after the House convened that he was starting the petition. By nightfall, more than 39 members had signed it. It was in the form of a letter to Chairman Doughton, and it said, in part:

"The desire of many citizens to put this country on a pay-as-you-go income tax basis has become perhaps the foremost domestic issue. It is the duty of Congress to meet this desire of the people as best it

Navy Budget Increased 1½ Billions

Administration Estimates 1944 Needs at Record $24,551,070,000

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Administration estimates of the cost of carrying on the naval phases of the war during the fiscal year beginning July 1 have mounted 1½ billions since January, to a new record total of $24,551,070,000, it was officially disclosed yesterday.

Detailed budget estimates for the Navy were sent to Congress by President Roosevelt Monday. The unprecedented total compares with the estimate of 23 billion dollars made by the President in January as the sea services share of an expected 97 billion dollar war outlay in 1944.

At the time the 1944 budget was submitted to Congress three months ago, the Administration withheld details covering the Navy, "because of possible material changes in war conditions."

The proposed 1944 naval outlay is $916,669,319 larger than the expected expenditures in 1943.

Shipbuilding Major Item

Major item in the precedent-shattering Navy budget is a $9,024,000,000 fund for shipbuilding. A total of $6,796,260,385 is expected to be spent for "increase and replacement of naval vessels" during 1943.

Other large expenditures include: $3,476,800,000 for naval ordnance, $4,286,211,000 for the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts—pay, food and clothing; $1,960,000,000 for the Bureau of Yards; $1,640,000,000 for the Bureau of Aeronautics; $961,058,000 for the Marine Corps and $467,879,000 for the Coast Guard.

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee says that a subcommittee will begin consideration of the huge naval estimates Saturday.

May Be "World-Beater"

Under the record expenditures, the United States Navy will reach a size far exceeding anything the world has ever seen.

The "seven-ocean Navy' will include scores of aircraft carriers, thousands of planes and hundreds of battleships, cruisers and destroyers. A total of 2½ million officers and men will man these ships and necessary bases to service them.

One important item in the new budget is a $210,000,000 project for building floating drydocks. The outlay for maintaining ships runs to $$1,830,000,000.

Food Conferences Will Admit Press

All full sessions of the forthcoming international food conference to be held in the United States will be opened to the press, Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information said yesterday. President Roosevelt previously indicated that reporters might be prevented from covering the meetings.

Rommel Taken By Surprise, Reporter Says

Events Indicate Axis Army Caught Off Balance by Attack

By Don Whitehead
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Eighth Army North of Gabes, Tunisia, April 6 (Delayed).—The Eighth Army is lashing out once again toward Tunis, and General Montgomery appears to have caught Marshal Rommel by surprise in his sudden thrust.

The attack was under way this morning as the stars were being washed away by the first cold light of dawn.

Indications are that Rommel did not expect the British to move so soon after the break-through and the flanking of the Mareth Line.

Today the British moved forward to wipe out the enemy defenses along the Wadi Akarit, 18 miles north of Gabes, and to rush the enemy deeper into the Tunisian pocket.

The Wadi Akarit was Rommel's best natural defensive position between Gabes and Sousse. In some features it was similar to the Mareth position as the enemy right flank was protected by mountains, the left by the sea, and with the wadi and anti-tank ditches shielding the more vulnerable sectors.

The thunder of the guns' opening barrage at 4:15 a. m. trumpeted the attack. In the last hour before dawn the flashes of many guns stabbed the night like a giant fireworks display and the earth shuddered with the steady roll of cannonading and the explosion of enemy and British shells.

Red, white and green signal flares streaked lace-like in bright colors across the sky.

The Eighth Army was on the move again in its historic drive across Africa.

The British main thrust centered on driving two bridgeheads across the Wadi Akarit and antitank ditches on the narrow front just

Nazis' Wadi Akarit Line Is 'Smashed Completely;' Low-Flying Allied Airmen Rip Ranks of Africa Corps

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, April 7.—The British Eighth Army has smashed completely Marshal Rommel's Wadi Akarit defenses 20 miles north of Gabes, and today joined forces with American troops under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., in relentless pursuit of the fleeing Africa Corps, whose ranks were ripped by low-flying Allied airmen.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons in London that more than 6000 prisoners already had been taken in this new victory, which led to a quick union between the British and American armies of the Gafsa-Gabes road.

The long anticipated junction of the British and Americans also merged the air forces, which were declared in a special communique to be "now enjoying common targets."

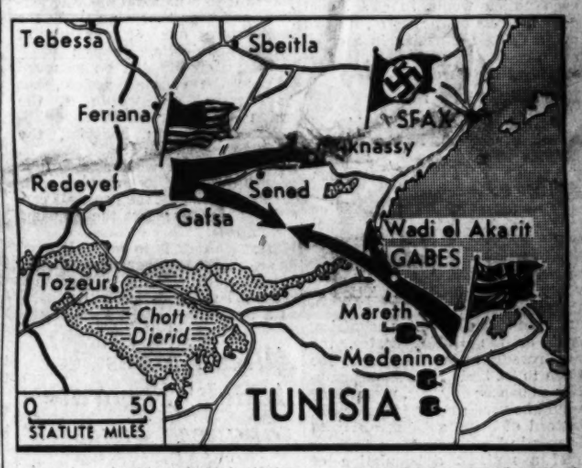
Advanced troops of the Second American Corps fought through the flank of the withdrawing enemy forces and united with the British on the ridge of Chemsi, 15 miles east of El Guetar on the road to the coast.

As the Americans and the British met triumphantly on the hill, where elite German troops had fought bitterly only a few hours earlier, heavy forces of American Billy Mitchell bombers with a Spitfire escort were bombing the enemy transports fleeing northward from the area.

Rommel's Armor Contained

It now can be disclosed officially that an American infantry division which for more than two weeks has been trying to batter through to the coast has performed the vital role of containing most of Rommel's armor in this sector, thereby weakening his defenses, first at the Mareth Line and then on the new line along the Wadi El Akarit which the Eighth Army cracked in two hours yesterday.

When the British infantrymen scaled two hills commanding the Wadi Akarit Line early yesterday, smashed a counterattack and began mopping up, Rommel's gamble to hold his triangular flank against the Americans was lost.



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Contact between the British Eighth Army and the American Second Army Corps (arrows) was reported last night. British had driven northward after shattering Mareth Line and Wadi El Akarit defenses, while U. S. forces drove eastward from the Gafsa area. Another U. S. force (upper arrow, left) was likewise pushing eastward beyond Maknassy

In this triangle between the sea, El Guetar and Maknassy, the Americans had waged day after day the bitterest kind of struggle to gain a few hundred yards across a rugged terrain pocketed with machine guns and artillery and swathed with minefields.

Still Collecting Prisoners

By yesterday afternoon many of Rommel's crack tank troops which had long been concentrated in the El Guetar area threatening to smash any overextended American effort began lumbering northward under a smoke screen.

Harassed by flare-dropping R. A. F. bombers last night, the enemy's vehicles continued to edge toward the rear and at dawn American riflemen plunged forward against dwindling resistance.

There is no official information as to whether any considerable enemy force was trapped on the south side of the Gafsa-Gabes Road when the Americans and British spliced their common front, but the Eighth Army still was collecting prisoners along the coast.

Chronologically, it was the British Eighth Army's successful storming of the Akarit Line which led to the union of the British and Americans in southern Tunisia. But the British are first to point that the manner in which these American infantrymen, with their excellent artillery, staved off repeated German tank thrusts during the Mareth offensive and continued to hammer Rommel's flank while Montgomery got ready for the Akarit attack, counted much in the scales for the Allied breakthrough.

Rommel's Position Critical

Rommel's position grew more critical hourly. Front reports said General Patton's troops in the Maknassy sector, 45 miles to the northwest, had cleaned out Axis flank positions to gain elbow room for another lunge toward the sea in an effort to cut off Rommel.

The Americans were only 28 miles from the Axis coastal road in this sector.

Rommel's fleeing men were being raked by Allied airmen in the greatest aerial armada ever hurled into action in Africa.

At least 500 planes bombed and strafed Rommel's rear airfields yesterday in coordination with the Eighth Army land blow, while the others striking at Sicily and the Mediterranean narrows off Tunisia sank or damaged at least 17 more Axis ships.

This Allied aerial performance was reported to have eclipsed Monday's 1000 sorties, and reconnaissance has established that the Monday raids alone resulted in the destruction or damage of 150 parked enemy planes in Sicily and Tunisia.

A concentration of hundreds of British guns—Churchill said 500—opened the Wadi Akarit barrage which broke the back of Rommel's 12-mile defense line in the darkness early yesterday.

British and Indian infantrymen plunging through holes torn in the German-Italian positions quickly overwhelmed two hills anchoring the Wadi Akarit lines in the west. Tanks and mobile infantry also poured through the breaches.

The enemy "fought with savage vigor to restore the situation," said Churchill, "but all his counterattacks were repulsed. By nightfall the open country had been reached."

An Allied communique said that 5000 Axis captives were taken in the first phases of the operation, but a later announcement said additional prisoners had been rounded up.

Most of the prisoners were reported to be Italian, an indication that the German leader had characteristically abandoned them and had withdrawn his elite German armored troops.

Rommel's next defensive hope was to make a stand near Cekhira between the sea and the Sebkret salt marsh, 30 miles north of Gabes. But the British now have broken into a flat coastal terrain, and the American troops at Maknassy also were a distinct flanking threat to any

Fire Law Violation Notices Bewilder D. C. Landlords

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Consternation and confusion yesterday followed close on the heels of a squad of policemen who began serving 1780 Washington landlords with notices which said they could not have licenses because their premises did "not comply with the fire regulations."

The notices warned the landlords that they were liable to immediate prosecution for operating without the licenses. The penalty might be $300 fine or 90 days in jail, or both, for each offense.

The forms were gotten up this week, after Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, called on the District Commissioners to enforce the fire laws or get out of office. McCarran's demand came after seven persons died in firetraps here in two weeks.

Many of the landlords who got the notices yesterday said they could not understand what was wrong with their premises. All the form said was:

Giving Begins Early

Eager Federal Workers Start Government Girl Plane Drive

Hundreds of Federal employes yesterday indicated their eagerness to become part-purchasers of warplanes for the Army and Navy as the GOVERNMENT GIRL drive, sponsored by The Post in cooperation with the Council of Personnel Administration, officially opened in all Government offices.

Because the planes will be christened GOVERNMENT GIRL, feminine employes have volunteered to make collections of $1 (no more, no less) from coworkers who wish to have a share in the drive.

Types of the air craft—one each for the Army and the Navy—will depend on how much money is raised in the campaign, which ends April 22. Although donations are limited to $1, those who wish to give more may do so in the names of members of their family and friends; thus the Treasury Department, ultimate recipient of the funds, will have its work simplified and every contributor will have an equal share.

Personnel offices in each Government department have charge of collecting the money, and several—representing the Veterans' Administration and the Department of Commerce—reported yesterday that enthusiastic employes had "jumped the gun" and had made collections Tuesday, 24 hours before the drive actually opened. All funds are sent directly to the Treasury.

From Chairman Robert Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Commission came hearty indorsement of the plan.

"I think the GOVERNMENT GIRL drive is an excellent idea and a potent morale builder," he declared. "I am delighted to see Federal employes cooperating to have planes of their own."

Donald S. Dawson of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation heads the committee established by the Council of Personnel Administration to handle the campaign. Other members are W. B. Avery of the War Department, J. S. Davitt of the Navy Department, Henry F.

Britain Offers Plan For Bank of Nations

Gold Supplanted in Keynes Scheme For World-Wide Credit Institution

By the Associated Press

London, April 7.—A world credit institution, designed to expand world trade and serve as "a genuine organ of truly international government," was proposed by Lord Keynes today in a white paper issued by the British government.

The plan, developed by the economist and adviser to the exchequer, in collaboration with other government experts, set forth as a basis for discussion a United Nations "International Clearing Union" to have executive offices in New York and London.

It would operate as a bank of nations, creditor nations allowing their balances to accumulate as deposits, while the union would lend these deposits for short periods to debtor nations, just as a commercial bank accepts deposits and makes loans.

The plan subordinates gold, in contrast with the United States Treasury's proposal for a five billion dollar international stabilization fund, and says, "The purpose of the clearing union is to supplant gold as a governing factor, but not dispense with it."

Special Currency

The union would keep its accounts in a currency, "to be called (let us say) bancor, fixed (but not unalterably) in terms of gold and accepted as the equivalent of gold" by all members of the union for settling international balances. (The United States proposal suggests a currency called unitas, with a fixed value of 10 gold dollars.)

The union would not do business with traders and commercial banks, but only with central banks and similar institutions, such as the Federal Reserve in the United States.

Each nation would be given quotas, governing both their borrowings and their deposits, based on the volume of their world trade, and altered from time to time. No fixed sum such as the five billion dollars mentioned in the United States Treasury's stabilization fund proposal, is mentioned.

Lord Keynes outlines the institution as a mechanism through which each nation would in effect deal with the rest of the world, instead of all nations engaging in a criss-cross of transactions and arrangements with each other.

Free Flow of Funds

He writes that it would aid each nation in keeping its dealings in balance with the world, and thus promote a free and expanding flow of funds and commerce.

In the case of countries doing excessive borrowing, the union would influence them to put their house in order, by such means as reducing the value of their currency, or surrendering a portion of their gold.

In the case of creditor countries, such as the United States, the union would make it desirable for them to let their balances accumulate as bancor deposits, where they would be used as a basis for credit, instead of being sterilized as gold hoards in bank vaults.

If a nation's accumulation of credit balances became excessive, it might be influenced to expand its domestic credit, reduce tariffs, or even increase the value of its currency.

The plan is in apparent conflict with the United States proposal, which would give a veto power to the United States by arranging for at least a 25 per cent vote on a governing board, in which an 80 per cent vote would be necessary for important decisions.

International Scope

Keynes says:

"Management of the institution must be genuinely international, without the preponderant power of veto or enforcement lying with any country or group."

The British government, however, described the plan as only a preliminary contribution to discussion, and said it was "not committed to the principles or details of the scheme," although it had been presented for technical examination to United States Government experts, and discussed with officials of the Dominions and India.

Lord Keynes suggests each United Nation be given fixed quotas as to the amount of borrowing which they may do, based on their average trade balance over a period of time, and rather flexible quotas as to the amount of credit they may accumulate.

Some British sources felt the American plan placed too great an emphasis on gold, the Financial Times commenting:

"It is essential that gold should not remain as before the war the one and only import freely accepted by the United States economy."

(Gold holdings of the United States Treasury now exceed 22 billion dollars, in addition to which there are only about six billion dollars of officially reported monetary gold stocks in the world, and nearly a third of that is held in the United States under earmark for foreign account.)

Lord Keynes, in describing the position of gold in his plan, says:

"Gold still possesses great psychological value which is not being diminished by current events; and the desire to possess a gold reserve against unforeseen contingencies is likely to remain. . . .

"Moreover, by supplying an automatic means for settling some part of the favorable balances of the creditor countries, the current gold production of the world and the remnant of gold reserves held outside the United States may still have a useful part to play.

Would Supplant Gold

"Nor is it reasonable to ask the United States to de-monetize the stock of gold which is the basis of its impregnable liquidity.

"What in the long run the world may decide to do with gold is another matter. The purpose of the clearing union is to supplant gold as a governing factor, but not to dispense with it."

He proposes that central banks of various countries still have power to ship gold to one another, but that they not have power to bid a higher price for it than the union offers in terms of bancor.

Referring to what has been discussed in the United States as a possible international reconstruction finance corporation, the paper says:

"The machinery and organization of international medium-term and long-term lending is another aspect of postwar economic policy, not less important than the purposes which the clearing union seeks to serve, but requiring another, complimentary institution."

As to the soundness of the credit union operation, Lord Keynes likens it to a national banking system, and says the principle is the well-known one of equality of credits and debits. He says:

"If no credits can be removed outside the clearing system, but only transferred within it, the union can never be in any difficulty as regards honoring the checks drawn upon it.

"It can make what advances it wishes to any of its members with the assurance that the proceeds can only be transferred to the clearing account of another member.

"Its sole task is to see to it that its members keep the rules and that advances made to each of them are prudent and advisable for the union as a whole."

stand in that sector.

The swift pursuit of the British suggested an early decision in all southern Tunisia. General Montgomery, as usual, had carefully assembled a strong striking force of men and materials before launching his latest drive.

Rommel's skill in retreat was being put to new tests, and his forces arrayed against the flanking Americans obviously were in difficulties because of the rapid British sweep northward.

(Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Berlin radio commentator, was quoted in a German broadcast as saying that British troops had broken into "a deeply echeloned defense zone reaching from Wadi Akarit many kilometers northward."

(Sertorius said the fight for Tunisia was 'a very unequal match" from the Axis standpoint because of "numerically far superior" Allied ground and air forces, and he predicted an early offensive by General Patton's troops in the Maknassy and Fondouk salients pointed toward the coast, and by General Anderson's British First Army in the north. "Only amateur strategists may assume that the enemy will not play out all his trump cards," he added. "Marshal Rommel has only his strategy and the tested bravery of his troops to throw into battle.")

The British artillery barrage at Wadi Akarit began at 4 a. m. yesterday morning. At 4:30 a. m. British infantry attacked Axis positions on two inland hills, captured them by 6 a. m., and repulsed a bitter Axis counterattack a half-hour later. British tanks and mobile infantry swarming through the gaps spread out and rolled up the entire position.

General Montgomery was said to have commented: "My troops fought splendidly. The fighting was as tough as anything we have encountered since El Alamein (in Egypt)."

Allied patrols were active everywhere along the front from the central sectors of Ousseltia and Fondouk which United States and French troops hold, to the north where the British First Army is operating near Mateur, 20 miles southwest of the Axis stronghold of Bizerte.

Allied aerial might was proving to be an enormous headache for the enemy. Surpassing Monday's huge operations, the Allied airmen in the 24-hour period ended yesterday accomplished these results:

Sank or damaged 17 Axis ships, and destroyed 27 enemy aircraft compared to five Allied plane losses. This was better than a five-to-one Allied advantage in aircraft alone.

The communique said more than 7 of the 17 Axis ships hit were sunk.

Soaring over Trapani Harbor in Sicily, Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's Flying Fortresses sank or damaged at least 10 ships. A string of bombs falling on a magazine also started a big fire and flames also were set in the dock, railway station and barracks areas. Three enemy planes were destroyed in combat by the big bombers.

Another wave of Fortresses struck a convoy 15 miles northeast of Zembra Island near the top of the Gulf of Tunis, setting a large ship afire and scoring a near miss on a destroyer.

Thirty German fighters were met and in a half-hour running fight three Messerschmitts and one Focke-Wulf were destroyed and many others damaged.

The Fortresses suffered no losses.

American Mitchell bombers early in the morning attacked another convoy in the Sicilian Straits, leaving two of the five ships sinking.

Another Axis convoy was only 5 miles from Bizerte when Flying Fortresses pounced on it. Despite terrific antiaircraft fire and enemy fighter opposition, a 6000-ton vessel laden with explosives was hit. It blew up with a brilliant flash, and the explosion rocked the Fortresses high in the air.

Fifteen Messerschmitts were shot down as the American precision bombers continued to unload their explosives and set afire another ship.

Another Convoy Hit

Allied fighter-bombers kept up this assault out to sea by attacking still another convoy of three ships trying to shuttle back to Sicily from Tunisia. Two of the ships were hit directly and burst into flames; the third was rocked by a near miss.

Wave after wave of Allied bombers supported by swarms of fighters attacked the La Fauconnerie Air Field, the most important Axis airdrome in central Tunisia, between Sfax and Kairouan.

This field, which was being used for operations against the advancing British Eighth Army, was blasted by at least 100 Mitchell and Boston bombers throughout the day. Spitfire and Warhawk fighters, at least 400 of them, supported the bombers which dropped hundreds of heavy explosives and fragmentation bombs on the field to start numerous fires.

Not one bomber was lost in these attacks, and many enemy fighters were damaged.

The Axis landing grounds at El Djem and Enfidaville also were attacked, and on Monday night Wellington bombers unloaded a large number of 2-ton bombs on the docks, railroad yards and depots at Tunis. Resulting fires could be seen 60 miles away.

The Western Desert air force also was in action as the sky vanguard of Montgomery's troops. Enemy vehicles and tanks along the coastal road were bombed and strafed, and the desert fighters also broke up a heavily-escorted formation of Axis dive-bombers attempting to attack the ground troops.

Allied Planes Attack 9 Separate Japanese Bases

United Nations Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), April 8 (INS). Allied warplanes yesterday carried out crippling attacks on nine separate Japanese bases from the Tanimbar Islands northwest of Australia to New Britain in the east.

Two other assaults were launched against Japanese shipping, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's noon communique announced today. Near misses rocked an enemy destroyer off Bougainville Island, in the Solomons sea, and a small convoy of two merchantmen escorted by another destroyer was strafed northwest of Kavieng, New Ireland.

Two Army Airmen Perish in Crash

Kissimmee, Fla., April 7 (AP).—Two flying officers were killed yesterday when their pursuit plane crashed 1 mile west of Haines City, the Army air base said today.

They were First Lieut. Benjamin M. Morehouse of Oakland, Calif., and Second Lieut. James H. G. Jellum of Del Notre, Colo.

U. S. Artillery Proves Tunisia Ace-in-Hole

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

With American Forces in Southern Tunisia, April 6 (Delayed) (AP).—The increasing ascendancy of American artillery and airpower over Axis guns and planes has left the Italians and Germans hard pressed.

In the El Guetar sector the capture of 30 Italian artillerymen provided further evidence of the superb counterbattery fire of American artillery whose performance throughout has been the brightest of any Army branch on this front.

All guns manned by the Italian prisoners were found knocked out by artillery fire which had also isolated them. The prisoners had not eaten for three days.

The Germans, attempting to make up for the lack of artillery by using dive-bombers, concentrated almost exclusively the last few days on the troublesome American batteries. But the destruction of 14 of the Stukas by American Spitfires Saturday indicated this was a forlorn expedient.

Lieut. Col. Barksdale Hamlett, of Columbia, Ky., Second Corps Artillery officer, said:

"Yesterday they were beating a tattoo on our chest with counter-battery fire. One of our forward observers who had been under fire three days spotted nine German batteries. 'We put everything we had on them, and when we let up all nine batteries had been silenced. That doesn't mean they were all knocked out, but after that battering they didn't dare fire further.

"We have such good communications we can lay down concentrations of our guns at any point at any time, and there isn't much that can come through alive.

"We have given them a hell of a beating with our artillery. We've got more and heavier guns than they and can put up an awfully stiff barrage. In their counter-battery fire yesterday we didn't have a casualty and lost only one ammunition truck."

Italian Cruiser Torpedoed; Sea Toll of Foe Rises

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, April 7.—The Axis' Tunisian stand is fast becoming a death trap for Italy's already hard-hit shipping, with British submarine attacks on a light cruiser, two tankers and a supply ship boosting to 40 or more the number of Italian ships sunk or badly damaged in a single week of the Allied naval-aerial onslaught.

A cruiser of the new Regolo class, which the admiralty announced had been attacked with a consequent explosion but otherwise unobserved results in the Strait of Messina, was the first of Italy's warships larger than destroyer size known to have been caught within Allied aerial, surface, or undersea striking range since last December.

The admiralty announced that besides a torpedo hit on the cruiser, one tanker was torpedoed and believed sunk off Sicily, another damaged and possibly sunk off Cape Spartivento at the southern tip of Italy and a medium-sized supply ship torpedoed in a convoy near Marittimo.

The Regolo class cruisers were laid down in 1938 and scheduled for completion in 1941. Their armor is extremely light, and their firepower consists of eight 5.3-inch guns and a like number of 21-inch torpedo tubes. They can lay mines.

Despite the pressing needs of the North African front and repeated attacks on convoys, Mussolini's fleet has been wary of any mid-Mediterranean meeting with Allied sea or air power for months, and the last blows at major Italian warships were reported last December.

Even then the attack had to be carried into an Italian port, where United States Liberators hit a battleship and two cruisers in a dusk attack on Naples December 4.

A Middle East communique reported that six ships in a convoy were sunk and an ammunition ship blown up in the Straits of Sicily by medium and fighter-bomber attacks yesterday. Many others were sunk or damaged at Trapani.

On April 5 a destroyer was blown up and other convoyed vessels were hit by bombers in a daily patrol of waters between the tip of Italy, Sicily and Tunisian ports.

On the same day the admiralty said light coastal forces of the navy sank a supply ship and possibly another off the Tuisian coast.

Bombers set two ships afire and hit others in a convoy in the Sicilian Strait and southwest of Sardinia April 4.

Five merchantmen were hit and at least 20 smaller vessels damaged by an American bomber raid on Cagliari just a week ago.

Bolivian Decree Declares Nation At War With Axis

La Paz, Bolivia, April 7 (AP).—The Bolivian Government tonight published a decree declaring Bolivia at war with the Axis powers and ordering general mobilization.

The decree was formulated by the cabinet at a meeting yesterday and must be referred to the Bolivian Congress for confirmation. No date has been announced for Congress' meeting. The move coincided with the visit of United States Vice President Henry A. Wallace, who conferred with President Enrique Penaranda and cabinet members yesterday.

Edward T. Folliard

On December 12, 1941, Eddie Folliard wrote a story on the gallant stand of the Marines on Wake Island. It was broadcast around the world in six languages and called "one of the finest newspaper stories in many a long day" by "Editor & Publisher" magazine. But it was just another day's work to Folliard, whose career sounds like something dreamed up in Hollywood for a newspaper movie. Eddie was born and educated in Washington, served in the Navy from June, 1917, to September, 1919, making 20 Atlantic crossings and surviving one shipwreck. Joining The Washington Post in 1923, he has done just about everything ever required of a reporter: citizens' meetings, courts, obituaries, police, District Building, Congress, White House, national political conventions and campaigns, visits of such notables as Cardinal Pacelli (now Pope Pius XII), Winston Churchill, Duke and Duchess of Windsor, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Anthony Eden, Queen Wilhelmina, King Peter of Yugoslavia. He visited Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands with President Hoover, covered the Canadian tour of King George and Queen Elizabeth, reported the electrocution of Hauptmann and the trial of Edith Maxwell, boasts an exclusive interview with Andrew Mellon on his gift to the Nation of the National Gallery and the Mellon art collection, flew to Martinique in 1940 for the first complete story out of that island following the fall of France. Folliard says his biggest assignment was writing the story of America's entry into the present war. He has been writing The Post's Sunday war review since Hitler invaded Poland and said even in the gloomiest days that Hitler couldn't win.

Red Army Captures 2 Localities Near Smolensk, Hold Along Donets

Enemy Blockhouses Smashed; Nazi Attacks Repelled

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), April 8.—Russian troops captured two more localities on the Smolensk front, and destroyed nine German guns and three blockhouses and dispersed an infantry concentration on the Donets defense line in the Ukraine, Moscow announced early today in its midnight communique.

Dispatches from Moscow also reported sharp local fighting in the Kuban Delta near Novorossisk, but there was no essential change in battle positions on the long Russian front.

The communique, recorded here by the Soviet monitor, said the Germans had suffered heavily in the last few days trying to crack Russian lines near Izyum, 70 miles southeast of Kharkov.

Near Belgorod, 50 miles above Kharkov, a German artillery battery of nine guns was reported destroyed and 20 gunners wiped out.

The capture of the two populated localities south of Bely on the Smolensk front resulted in the killing of 200 Germans, the communique said.

The German communique said that the Nazi offensive on the central Donets reached "planned goals" and that only lively local fighting was reported from a few sectors.

The Caucasian battlelines are close to the Black Sea naval base of Novorossisk, the only large town held by the Germans. Should the Germans lose the city, they would have to start all over again in the Caucasus to win back territory they overran last summer at terrible cost.

German aerial operations along the Donets were in considerable force.

The Germans attacked again in the Volkhov River sector south of Leningrad and lost heavily, the Russians said.

Chinese Halt Counterattack; Slay 100 Japs in Chekiang

By the Associated Press

Chungking, April 7.—The Chinese high command said today that a Japanese counterattack on Chinese positions west of Kinhwa, improtant railway town in Chekiang Province, was repulsed and more than 100 of the enemy were killed.

This clash on March 27 followed by one day a successful Chinese raid on Japanese positions west of Kinhwa, the Chinese reported, and added that fighting of this nature occurs regularly on the fringes of the occupied territory.

On March 24 the Chinese attacked two points near Suihsien, a Japanese base 90 miles northwest of Hankow in Hupeh Province, and inflicted more than 200 casualties, the war bulletin said.

The Chinese also reported a new attack on the Japanese column which crossed the Yangtze River near Shasi, and added that many of the enemy's soldiers were mopped up, while the remainder are being encircled in this Hupeh Province area.

Contraceptives Held Unimportant To Britain at War

London, April 7 (AP).—The Bishop of St. Albans asked the government in the House of Lords today whether the manufacture of contraceptives was regarded officially as work of national importance in recruiting labor and received the reply of "No, sir" from the Earl of Munster.

The bishop said his question was prompted by the fact that a woman in his diocese who registered for national service was directed to work in a firm which he estimated was manufacturing more than 33 million "contraceptive contraptions" annually.

When the woman objected to such employment, she was relieved of the job, the bishop said, but a letter from a regional office of the Labor Ministry explaining its actions mentioned "firms engaged wholly or mainly on work of national importance, if not actual munitions."

From this, the bishop said, it appeared that the ministry considered the manufacture of contraceptives as being of national importance. Lord Munster replied that consideration is given firms making surgical supplies but that this firm "is not solely engaged in the manufacture of contraceptives."

7 U-Boats 'Severely Damaged' In U. S. Fliers' Vegesack Raid

By Lewis Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, April 7.—The R. A. F. disclosed through a commentator today that American heavy bombers in their daylight attack March 18 at Vegesack had inflicted severe damage on 7 of 15 U-boats building there and submarine experts believe the yards' production will be impaired for many months.

The consensus after examination of reconnaissance photographs was that the Americans had struck what may have been the heaviest single blow of the war against U-boat production.

Detailed study of the pictures showed that one U-boat almost ready for launching was capsized in her berth; hits were scored on two being readied for mid-May launching, two which would reach full growth in mid-June and two in the embryonic stage.

Renault Damage Heavy

The full reconnaissance study is not yet ready on the American attack last Sunday on the Renault works outside Paris, but the R. A. F. commentator said it was without doubt "extremely successful and scarcely a single building in the entire plant area escaped some damage."

Other American attacks especially praised by the R. A. F. were those on Hamm's railway station in which 250 casualties resulted; Rennes, where a naval stores station was badly damaged, and Wilhelmshaven, where nearly all the harbor fixtures were damaged.

Of the R. A. F. night bombing forerunner of European invasion, the commentator said that the number of raids was increasing appreciably and that the large numbers of planes lost recently did not represent any alarming rise in the ratio of losses.

Morale Affected

Noting that the effects of bombings on German morale seemed to be mounting with the severity of the attacks, the commentator quoted from a Stettin newspaper which warned the German people that "terror raids must be expected to become longer and heavier." The Stettin writer also said that bomber forces could be diverted from Russia for suitable retaliation, but he asked what the gain would be "if the decision in the east is allowed to slip from our hands."

In a recapitulation of the principal destructions in recent raids, the R. A. F. said there were no signs that the Krupp plants at Essen were at work on March 22, 10 days after the second of the early March raids, and since then there has been another heavy blow at Essen.

The commentator said it was known that 15,000 Krupp workers and 90,000 of the 300,000 population of Essen had been deprived of their homes or places of business. He added that 62 acres of the Krupp buildings had been destroyed.

It also was noted that Berlin fire-fighters were so badly disorganized in the March 1 raid that they had to summon fire companies from as far as Leipzig, 110 miles away.

QuintsGiven Model Of 'Victory Fleet'

Callander, Ont., April 7 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets today became mistresses of a scale-model ocean freighter, a miniature of the five ships of "the Quint Victory fleet," which they personally will launch May 9 at Superior, Wis.

Germans Fleeing From Gabes Took 'Jewish Money'

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Gabes, Tunisia (Delayed), April 3. Before leaving Gabes the German military authorities "confiscated" 1,200,000 francs of "Jewish money" from three banks here.

The director of one bank described how a German officer came to his home and demanded cash. It was on a Saturday afternoon and the director told the officer, "the bank is closed now. You must come back Monday morning."

The German, knowing that by then the British might be in the town, insisted on the bank being opened immediately.

British Fall Back Before Foe in Burma

French Tars From U. S. In Britain

By the Associated Press

An East Coast Canadian Port, April 7.—Thousands of fighting men of the British Empire, ready for action on land, air or sea and hopeful of opening a new fr , and a group of De Gaullist French seamen off the battleship Richelieu and other French vessels berthed in the United States sailed from here recently en route to Britain. Their arrival overseas was announced tonight.

Among the thousands sent across from this foggy port were principally Canadian army men, but the movement included also hundreds of R. C. A. F. air and ground personnel, Anzac and British airmen from the combined training program in Canada and 70 men of the Royal and Canadian navies.

Several nursing sisters of the Canadian army and an officer of Britain's auxiliary territorial service, returning home from a secret mission on this side, made the crossing.

French Sailors to Fight

The French sailors are en route to service with the Fighting French of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

They had "deserted" the French war vessels shortly after they arrived at New York, Boston and Philadelphia from Dakar in French West Africa.

The fact that their taking "French leave" caused international complications among the representatives of the French factions and the United States Government did not worry them at all.

They stuck to their original assertion that some of the officers aboard their ships were definitely pro-Vichy, although that has been denied since by the commanding officer of the Richelieu and other French navy men.

They said their officers while at Dakar were openly favoring the cause of Hitler and the Vichyites and hoped for a victory for the Axis. After they sailed for America, the sailors said, they toned down their views and pretended to be more friendly to the United Nations.

Another reason for joining DeGaulle, they agreed almost unanimously, was the fact they hoped to get into action soon.

Pining for Action

"While those ships are still being fixed in America, we will be fighting submarines in the Atlantic," one Breton sailor said.

"We've been cooped up in Dakar ever since war began, with no chance to fight except when we were ordered to fight the British and our countrymen when they attacked Dakar," he continued. "Now we have a chance to fight the Germans. That's who we are mad at, not the English."

They were emphatic in denying that they joined the DeGaulists because they were offered bribes, as had been claimed after they skipped ship.

"We don't have to be bought off to fight for France," one said. "We only did it so we could help our country and get the Nazis out of there as quickly as possible."

Headed back to Britain after more than two years of exile in a Canadian internment camp were also some small groups of Italians and Germans who had been arrested and placed under surveillance when their countries went to war against Britain and who later were sent out to Canada.

Jap Infiltration Forces Retreat on Mayu Peninsula

By Thoburn Wiant
Associated Press Staff Writer

Calcutta, April 7.—Japanese infiltrations and the approach of the monsoon season forced the British Indian army to start pulling out of the Mayu Peninsula above the Burma port of Akyab to more tenable positions in the Kyau Apandu, three miles northwest, Marshal Archibald P. Wavell's command said today.

The communique said:

"The enemy dug in at Taungmaw and then proceeded during the past several days to develop a move against our exposed northern flank on the Mayu Peninsula. Infiltrating across the Mayu River south of Kwazoc, the enemy succeeded over the weekend in mounting a direct threat to our communications in the narrow strips between the hills and the sea north of Donbaik. To meet this outflanking movement, necessary readjustments have been made in our positions on the Mayu Peninsula."

Twelve-Day Silence Broken

The communique broke a 12-day silence on the Arakan front land activities which was maintained, according to a supplementary statement, because "it is not desirable to give the enemy any indication of our reaction to his infiltration movement across the Mayu River."

The communique disclosed that the Japanese were making every effort to take full advantage of the situation.

"The enemy has committed considerable air and land forces to regain, before the onset of the rains, ground lost in reoccupying areas which were untenable in any event during the monsoon," the supplemental British statement said.

"In fact, the same applies to certain positions still in occupation by our forces, but the Japanese may be expected to continue pressure with a view of gaining some local success before rains restrict operations."

American Liberator bombers from India again attacked the Pazundaung Bridge, near Rangoon, destroying the southern approaches, a U. S. communique said. Medium bombers attacked the enmey in north Burma and all planes returned.

Fighting Continues

The supplemental British statement said initial Japanese attempts to develop a drive in the Buthedaung-Maungdaw area, 65 miles northwest of Akyab, "to recover lost ground," had been brought to a standstill. Severe casualties were inflicted on the Japanese on the Mayu Peninsula and fighting continues, the communique said.

"The enemy effort does not arise from any heavy reinforcements for offensive purposes in Burma itself, but is simply consequent on their being able to commit reserves of air and land forces to counterattack in local areas in the knowledge that losses sustained cannot affect their capacity to defend themselves in Burma during the few weeks remaining before the rains," an Army spokesman said.

Farther north, the British said they had inflicted heavy casualties on the Japanese in the mountainous area south of Indin, a town in the Chindwin River Valley 45 miles inside Burma from the Indian province of Assam. Indin is 150 miles northwest of Mandalay.

British planes ranged widely over Burma. They bombed the village of Thinganet on the Arakan Front and machinegunned Japanese at Indin. The airdrome at Pakokku on the Irrawaddy River southwest of Mandalay also was bombed.

Hans Luther In Protective 'Custody'

Stockholm, Sweden, April 7 (AP). The Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet reported today, without confirmation, that Dr. Hans Luther, former German chancellor and former Ambassador to Washington, had been placed under "protective arrest" in Germany by Nazi officials.

Aftonbladet also said that Fritz Thyssen, German industrialist, and once an ardent supporters of Hitler, had been placed under custody in a Berlin Hotel.

After the French armistice, Vichy delivered him to the Germans from the French Riviera. The newspaper said an effort is being made in some German circles to use Thyssen as a "political instrument."

14 Allied Vessels, Destroyer Sunk, Germans Claim

By the Associated Press

The Germans claimed yesterday that their submarines in the Atlantic and Mediterranean had sunk 14 fully loaded Allied merchant ships totaling 102,000 tons, and had also sent a destroyer to the bottom.

The claim was made in a special communique by DNB, broadcast by the Berlin radio.

In the course of heavy attacks on Allied supply lines, five other ships were torpedoed, but their sinking could not be observed due to strong defense measures, the German announcement said. The German claims were unconfirmed by Allied sources.

east of the main coast road.

An hour before the barrage opened the infantry moved into position close to the enemy lines. Behind the creeping barrage the troops moved forward in the darkness to wipe out enemy gun positions and bridge the wadi ditches for armor.

It was their job to storm two heights called Fatnassa and Roumana overlooking the entire front and giving the enemy strong gun positions and observation.

One prong of the attack was directed at clearing the gap between these heights while the other moved to the east of the peaks. The British stormed the heights under the cover of artillery fire and smoke screen, taking cover in every natural protection to reach the enemy gun position.

(In a dispatch from the front, Reuters, British news agency, said that a rocket soared from the highest peak of Roumana announcing its capture just 75 minutes after the infantry began to move.

(Reuters, which termed the infantry's other objective "Hill 275," described the artillery barrage as the "most fearful" since El Alamein. The German guns answered only feebly, the agency said.

(As the sky lightened British tanks dashed throught the gap between the hills. Not long afterwards the first long column of Italian prisoners made its way to the British rear.)

This time Rommel put no trust in the Italians to hold strategic positions by themselves. Young Fascists were on the coast in a sector which it was impossible to attack in force because of the waterfilled Wadi. But all along the rest of the front German troops were mixed with Italians. The Germans were taking no chances on the Italians surrendering as hundreds did in the battle of the Mareth Line.

But while the front line area churned with bitter fighting, roads to the rear were as quiet as a blue grass village on a Sunday afternoon. Occasional trucks and cars were on the road, but that was all.

The big job of bringing men, tanks, guns and supplies forward had been accomplished. The rest is up to the men in the front lines.

Scrapple Rationed When 20 Per Cent Meat

OPA tackled the question, "What is scrapple?" yesterday and came up with a mathematical formula.

It ruled that scrapple can be considered a meat product and be charged meat ration points only if meat makes up 20 per cent or more of its contents.

Mrs. J. J. Astor To Get Divorce

New York, April 7 (AP).—The Daily News says tonight in a copyrighted story that Ellen Tuck French Astor is now at a ranch near Reno, Nev., and that her marriage to John Jacob Astor 3d will end in a quiet divorce six weeks hence when her legal residence in Nevada is established.

The newspaper says that an agreement, by which Astor gives his wife an outright settlement unofficially estimated at one million dollars, has been signed, sealed and delivered.

Custody of their son, Billy Astor, 7, will be divided, Mrs. Astor, known as Tucky, to have him six months a year and the father the other six, the News reports. The paper says that the couple, married June 30, 1934, at Newport, have been living apart for several years.

OPA Chief Faces Rent Rise Pressure

Real Estate Boards Foster Program Which Officials Feel Will Mean Increase

Prentiss M. Brown, OPA Administrator, must decide shortly whether to continue present OPA rent-control policies or adopt a program submitted by the National Association of Real Estate Boards which OPA rent officials are convinced will increase rents.

The real estate group is viewed by OPA rent officials as pushing a national campaign to raise rent ceilings. As evidence of the existence of the campaign, it is pointed out that seven bills and two resolutions to ease rent regulations have been introduced in the House and one in the Senate. All of the bills support in varying degrees proposals made by the real estate group.

Officials believe that the rent control program has been subject at attack because it has worked out to be one of the most conspicuously successful of OPA programs. With some reason, real estate people have been able to contend that they are faced with tighter controls than any other group.

OPA rent control does not apply to the District which is operating under a separate rent-control statute, but surrounding Maryland and Virginia counties are regulated under the Federal program.

The real estate group recently submitted a statement to Brown which indorsed "sound and just rent control in time of war," but commented that "just as the interests of the tenant should be protected against exploitation, equal justice demands that hardship and prejudice created for property owners should be mitigated so far as possible under a system of controlled prices."

The real estate group submitted a four-point program calling for lowering of the OPA requirement for a down payment of one-third and a 90-day waiting period in purchasing houses, the setting up of local rent committees to act as an appeals board, granting of more consideration to costs in determining rents, and the taking of "proper care . . . to avoid the creation of prejudice and emotion."

The answer provided by OPA rent officials is that rent control which now covers 80 million persons living in 355 areas has been effective, but that landlords have not suffered because a low vacancy rate has boosted incomes.

Using Detroit as an example, an OPA survey has showed that net operating income for Detroit apartment house landlords was up 43 per cent above 1939 last year, and that landlords renting smaller structures had received 64 per cent more operating income.

Labor groups have interested themselves in the struggle and have urged Brown to continue present rent policies.

The C. I. O. Cost of Living Committee wrote Brown as follows:

"The Real Estate Board's program under the guise of 'preserving a fair and equitable system for preventing inflationary rents' is simply another brazen attempt to force OPA to give up effective control of rents and to relinquish the only successful attempt to control the cost of living for the millions of workers engaged in fabricating the materials for victory."

Local rent committees, the C. I. O. charged, has the effect of promoting "confusion, argument, and delay behind which the landlord group can hide their profiteering." The requirement restricting sales of houses "reduces labor turnover and absenteeism caused by chains of tenant evictions set up through forced sales," the C. I. O. said.

R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, C. I. O., telegraphed Brown that the real estate group program "is obvious attempt to invalidate your splendidly successful program and to secure increased rent, additional and unwarranted profit for a small segment of the real estate industry."

Internment Urged For Prostitutes With Sex Disease

Chicago, April 7 (INS).—Internment of prostitutes infected with venereal disease was urged as a wartime precaution tonight by two physicians writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Doctors Hyman Straus and Isaak Grunstein of Brooklyn, N. Y., who made a study of 615 women infected with gonorrhea, wrote:

"The cure of an infected prostitute requires adequate compulsory hospitalization. Repeated offenders should be interned for the duration of the war."

The authors pointed out that 100 infected women, even while under private medical care, conceivably could infect approximately half a million men over a year's time.

farmers.

Farmers raising 62 per cent of the country's corn do not participate in the Government's payment program and so receive less for their corn than farmers who get Government checks, he said. By forcing the payments out of parity, these farmers would be getting equal treatment with the others, he contended.

Other food-front developments yesterday included:

1. A second "food council" meeting at the White House, where the President conferred with Food Administrator Chester Davis, Secretary Wickard, Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes and heads of four major farm groups. Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation said he told the President taxes and cost of distribution were two additional problems now worrying the farmer. "Farmers fear inflation and think taxes are mixed in with the solution," he said, declaring himself in favor of pay-as-you-go.

2. The two-week suspension of the order requiring livestock slaughterers to set aside percentages of their production for Government purchase was extended indefinitely by Administrator Davis "to facilitate a more even flow of meat under the rationing program." It was made clear, however, that the order was not set aside permanently.

3. Completing its pricing of major 1943 vegetable packs, the OPA established specific dollars-and-cents maximum prices for canned snap beans at levels approximately the same as those of 1942.

OPA Removes Ban On Small Sales Of Seed Potatoes

To aid persons with small gardens, the Office of Price Administration yesterday removed its 50-pound regulation, originally established to curb sales of seed potatoes for human consumption in order to escape price ceilings.

Purchases for planting purposes now may be made in any quantity.

Shifting Labor Seen Periling Ship Goal

said in a formal statement.

The Commission announcement was one of the first frank statements from a Government agency that the manpower problem was interfering with meeting our production goals. A similar statement with respect to the Willow Run bomber plant was made by the War Production Board.

Vickery stated that the ships that will be most seriously affected by the manpower dearth include tankers, aircraft carriers, troop transports, and escort vessels "because the greatest shortages appear in yards on such construction."

"There is no need to stress the vital importance of such vessels, particularly escort vessels," Vickery said. "In addition, of course, is the increasing need for more and more Liberty ships as our forces must be supplied in ever-growing numbers in foreign lands."

"We are asking and receiving," Vickers said, "hearty cooperation from other Government agencies, including the Manpower Commission and its United States Employment Service, as well as shipyard managements and organized labor."

The Commission stated that the shortage of labor would not be reflected in current figures because construction work on vessels being delivered now was performed in the previous quarter.

"Hiring facilities of the United States Employment Service are being used to overcome the deficit," the Commission said. It was recalled that Henry K. Kaiser, West Coast shipbuilder, had to resort to coming into the New York City labor market to recruit men some months ago.

"In many shipbuilding communities, serious housing shortages have made it impossible for these areas to provide homes for as many workers as the yards could use," the commission said the War Manpower Commission reported.

Government Girl Plane Drive Begins

Hubbard of the Council and Arthur B. McLean of the Federal Security Agency.

Typical of the progress already made for GOVERNMENT GIRL is that of the Interstate Commerce Commission, where personnel heads have distributed materials for the campaign to 35 key persons in various sections.

Each division will make its own choice for a representative at ceremonies to be held here early in May, when the planes bought with Federal employes' dollars will be brought to Washington for all contributors to see. Just how the final selection will be made for the girl to represent the entire ICC has not yet been decided.

In the Department of Commerce, a similar plan for choice or the ultimate "Miss Commerce" is under way, except that each individual bureau has decided on its own method for selection—some for personality, some for popularity, some for most industrious workers and so on. There will be approximately 10 girls in the final choice.

A. R. Thomson, Veteran Consul, Found Fatally Shot in Home

Alfred R. Thomson, 54, a veteran of 30 years in the consular service, was found fatally shot last night in the bedroom of his home, 4813 Quebec Street Northwest. He was pronounced dead at Georgetown Hospital about a half hour after he had been found unconscious with a bullet wound in his head. Police said an English .32-caliber pistol was beside him.

THOMSON

According to Detectives C. C. Carver and H. E. Huffman of the Homicide Squad, Thomson's 15-year-old son, Malcolm, heard the shot and called his mother, Mrs. Marian Thomson. The latter rushed to the bedroom, Carver said, and found her husband mortally wounded. She called the family physician, Dr. William M. Ballinger, of 4423 Hillbrook Lane Northwest, who rendered first aid. A private ambulance removed Mr. Thomson to the hospital. He was pronounced dead at 8:30 p. m.

Carver said that Mr. Thomson wrote three notes before the shot rang out. One was to his wife and two others to local banks. The detective quoted young Thomson as saying that his father had been despondent recently.

Mr. Thomson was born in Linden, Md., in 1889, the son of Dr. Lewis T. and Anna Merryman Thomson. He was graduated from Central High School in Washington in 1907 and studied political science at George Washington University from 1908 until 1910.

He married Miss Marian Mary Moffat in 1925. The couple has two sons, David Ray and Malcolm Stuart Thomson.

Mr. Thomson was with the Weather Bureau from 1907 until 1911 and in the latter year he was appointed consular assistant. He was later vice and deputy consul general at Berlin from 1912 until 1914. He served as vice consul at Saloniki from 1914 until 1915. He then served in Belgrade and later returned to Saloniki and was detailed to the Department of State in 1916. From 1917 until 1920 he was consul general at Moscow and Irkutsk and served successively at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Zagreb, Jugoslavia and Copenhagen until 1923. From 1923 until 1925 he was at Madras, India. From 1925 until 1929 he was at Bradford, England. He then went to Manchester, England, where he remained until 1935. From 1935 until 1940 he was consul general at Dresden, Germany. He was appointed secretary in the diplomatic service in 1937. Then he was named consul general at Hamburg, Germany, in 1941. In December of that year he was assigned to duty in Glasgow, Scotland.

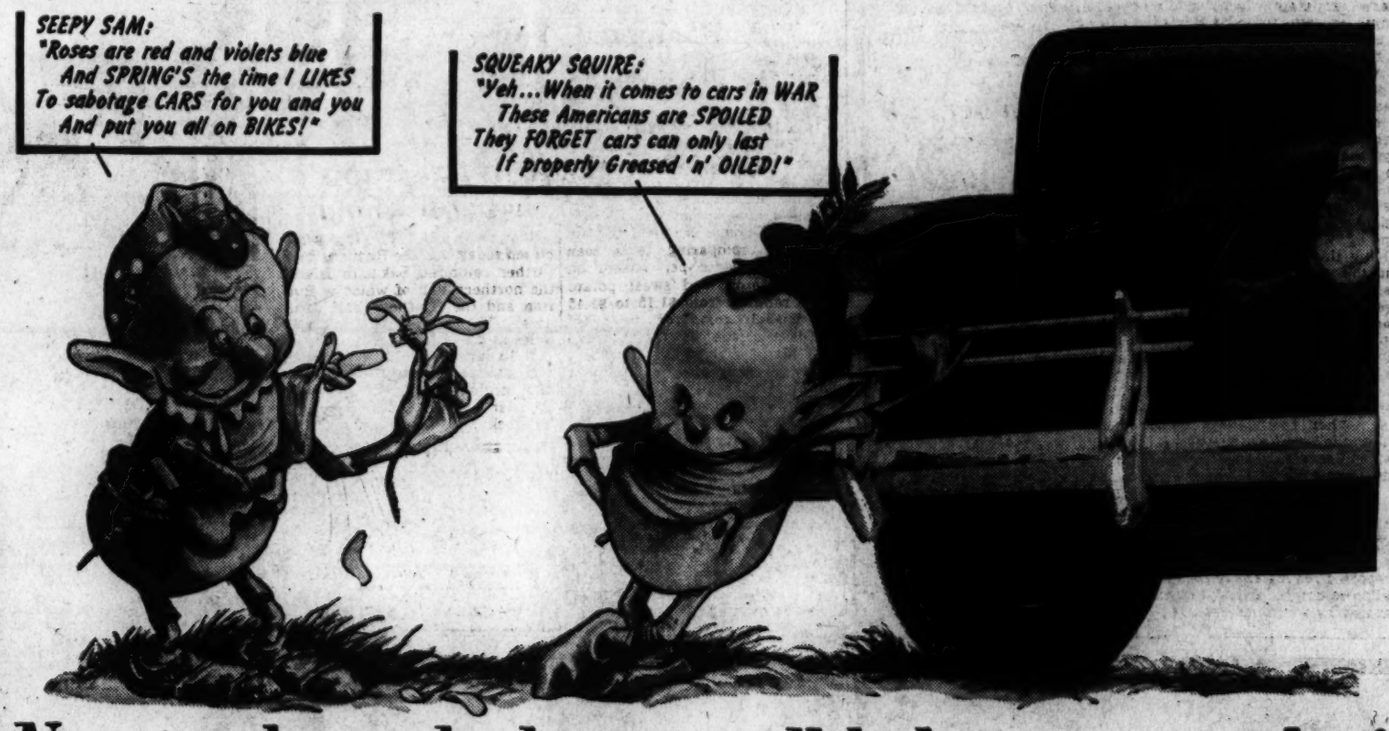
Don't let APRIL be your car's "Unlucky Month"!



SEEPY SAM:
"Roses are red and violets blue
And SPRING'S the time I LIKES
To sabotage CARS for you and you
And put you all on BIKES!"
SQUEAKY SQUIRE:
"Yeh...When it comes to cars in WAR
These Americans are SPOILED
They FORGET cars can only last
If properly Greased 'n' OILED!"

Now is when a little care will help your car a lot!

There was never a Spring when your car needed a thorough check-over more than it does this year. No matter how little you may run it, you can't afford to have parts wear out or go bad. We're listing below some of the important things to do now—for your own and for Uncle Sam's sake, too. Let your Esso Dealer take care of them for you. See him soon: HE'S A GREMLIN CHASER.

✓ RADIATOR. Have your Esso Dealer drain out anti-freeze, flush the radiator with clean water and a radiator cleaner, if necessary, then refill with water plus Tri-Rad Rust Preventive. Remember rust causes deterioration even though you may be running your car a lot less this year.

✓ CRANKCASE. Another Spring "must" is to drain out the Winter-worn oil, clean the crankcase with special flushing oil and refill with the proper summer grade of long-wearing Essolube Motor Oil.

✓ TRANSMISSION-DIFFERENTIAL. These valuable gears are hard to replace nowadays! Have your dealer drain out the worn Winter oils and replace them with the proper Summer grade of new, fresh Esso Lubricants.

✓ CHASSIS. The chassis of your car has taken a beating through the Winter, so have your Esso Dealer give it a Verified Esso Lubrication—the lubrication job that puts the right lubricant in the right place.

✓ BATTERY. Reduced driving due to gasoline rationing has probably put your battery through a hard winter. Be sure to have your Esso Dealer check it and recharge it if necessary.

✓ TIRES. How far have your tires gone since you had them gauged and switched so as to extend their life as far as possible? If it is over 2,000 miles have your Esso Dealer check them with the Tire Tread Depth Gauge...and switch them immediately, if necessary. Two tire-saving tips: 1. Maintain 32 pounds pressure at all times (the new war-time standard). 2. Never drive over 35 miles per hour.

Let your Esso Dealer check over your whole car. You may need a new light bulb, or a windshield wiper blade. Probably the finish of your car, for protection, needs a washing and then a good polishing job. See your Esso Dealer for whatever you need to keep your car in good running order.

Food Parleys To Admit Press, Davis Asserts

OWI Director Elmer Davis said yesterday that all full sessions of the forthcoming international food conference to be held in this country would be open to the press.

President Roosevelt had indicated at a press conference March 19 that reporters would not be allowed to cover the meeting. This was followed by reports that Davis' Office of War Information would perform that duty for the press "in the interest of efficiency." Immediate criticism was that such an arrangement would give the public only the information that the Government wished to pass along.

Yesterday the OWI head said that his office is not running the affair. However, while saying all full sessions will be open to reporters he pointed out that committee meetings, as is customary, "will be closed in order to enable participants to get their work done."

Davis said the conference still is expected to be held late this month, but the place has not been selected as far as he knew. He added, however, that it will not be in Des Moines, Iowa, as had been reported. Other reports were that Hot Springs, Va., had been chosen.

Africa Strategy Works

Switching to the war fronts, Davis declared that the Tunisian fighting has fallen into an Allied-controlled pattern of annihilation and expressed the view that the once-feared German Luftwaffe is apparently not in hiding, but badly weakened.

The war information chief told his press conference that our offensive in Tunisia "is definitely an operation of Allied strategy." He said the Americans first force Rommel to use troops in the northwest and then Montgomery's British Eighth Army comes in from the south.

"And this operation will be repeated and repeated until Rommel will have no place to go," asserted Davis.

As to the Luftwaffe, Davis expressed belief that if the Nazis still had their reported "enormous reserve," they would use some of it in Tunisia instead of taking the "battering" that they are taking. Hitler's apparent lack of air strength was attributed by Davis to the combination of plant destruction by Allied bombers and disruption of the Wehrmacht's transportation system.

Davis called attention to the success of Allied air operations, saying that the Germans will increasingly find that bombings so far have been only a "foretaste" of what is coming from now on.

Davis introduced Dr. Gerald Winfield, OWI representative in Chunking, who told of Allied work in giving the Chinese information about the war through still pictures and "magic lantern movies."

The OWI China representative declared that the Chinese' tastes run to nonwar pictures as they are "a little war weary in some directions."

Dr. Winfield said audiences range from about 400 Chinese to 10,000. When about 10,000 come to view the pictures, a circular screen and several projection units are used, he said.

About That Visit

De Gaullists 'Surprise' Eisenhower

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, April 7.—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower today expressed "surprise" over a French National Committee statement that he had asked Gen. Charles de Gaulle to postpone his visit to North Africa, thus indicating that a new misunderstanding had arisen to plague the delicate negotiations for union of Giraudists and De Gaullists.

The headquarters statement did not flatly deny that Eisenhower had asked De Gaulle to delay his trip, but said cryptically that since the communique was issued in London, Eisenhower "has no doubt that a full statement of the circumstances will be made in London."

The National Committee statement in London Monday said that General Eisenhower has asked General de Gaulle to delay his journey to French North Africa. General de Gaulle and the National Committee regret this delay which could not be prolonged without serious disadvantages."

Meanwhile, Gen. George Catroux continued conferences with Gen. Henri Giraud designed to establish a basis for De Gaulle's talks here, with matters reportedly progressing satisfactorily.

It was reported Giraud may visit the United States to stress the importance of bringing the French army up to the standard of the American and British armies in equipment.

Churchill 'in Accord'

London, April 7 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill said today he was in full accord with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhowever in the latter's request to Gen. Charles de Gaulle to delay his proposed trip to North Africa.

Churchill's statement said:

"With regard to the statement issued by the French National Committee on Monday last about the delay enforced on General de Gaulle's visit to North Africa, the Prime Minister wishes it to be known that he has been throughout in fullest agreement with General Eisenhower in deprecating the visit by De Gaullie during the battle crisis in Tunisia, which requires the undivided attention of the Allied command."

U. S. Bombers Renew Attacks On Kiska Base

American Army bombers renewed their heavy assaults on the Japanese air and submarine base on Kiska Monday, scoring hits on enemy positions, the Navy announced yesterday.

Five raids were made on the Jap base in the Aleutians that day by big Liberator and medium Mitchell bombers, escorted by Lightning and Warhawk fighters, a communique reported.

The planes also wheeled northwest to attack Nipponese installations on Attu Island, westernmost of the Aleutians.

The Navy communique also reported an atack on the Jap base at Vila, on Kolombangara Island in the middle Solomons on Tuesday. Navy Dauntless dive-bombers, escorted by Lightning fighters made the assault, leaving the oft-bombed base in flames.

Davis Reveals Support Prices On Five Crops

The War Food Administration yesterday announced increased support prices for dry beans, dry peas, peanuts, soybeans and flaxseed—and special payments for Irish potatoes and truck crops raised in excess of 90 per cent of 1943 farm goals.

The Commodity Credit Corporation will be used as the finance agent, according to the announcement, and no new legislation will be needed.

Farmers will thereby be assured higher prices for their war crops, but the Government—and not the consumer direct—will bear the cost.

Chester C. Davis, in this, his first official act as food administrator, moved in the face of congressional opposition to "subsidies" for farm products.

Congress Balked

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard recently asked 100 million dollars to put into effect an incentive payment program whereby farmers would have reaped substantially the same benefits. But Congress balked.

Working to throw off "subsidies" and put farm products back on prices sent up "by the law of supply and demand," farm bloc Congressmen expressed themselves against the incentive payment idea.

This new method was admitted by Department of Agriculture officials to be "another way" to get the same thing and to speed up production of the vital crops.

Under its provisions the CCC will offer to purchase all 1943-crop dry edibile beans at $6.50 per hundred pounds. These support prices compare with $5.60 per 100 pounds of most classes of beans on January 17.

To encourage an increased quantity of blackeyed peas in the South, the CCC will purchase the peas at $5.75 per 100 pounds for No. 1 product. Dry edible peas grown in the Northwest will be purchased at $5.65 per 100 pounds, rather than at the $5.50 price previously announced under the incentive plan.

Typical Prices

Other typical support prices will be:

Peanuts—For Virginia and Spanish types an average of $140 per ton, compared to $132 announced on February 10.

Soybeans—Yellow soybeans having 14 per cent moisture content, $1.80 per bushel instead of $1.70 previously announced.

Flaxseed—The support price and loan rates will be $2.85 per bushel, instead of $2.70 announced March 4.

Grain sorghums and sweet potatoes—Loans at not less than 85 cents a 56-pound bushel for grain sorghums, comparing to a loan rate of 50 cents per bushel on the 1942 crop, and sweet potato prices ranging from $1.15 to $1.45 per bushel, compared to relief purchases made by the Agricultural Marketing Administration in 1942 and averaging 90 cents a bushel.

Potatoes and truck crops—a payment of 50 cents a bushel will be made on the normal yield of acreage planted to Irish potatoes in excess of 90 per cent of the individual farm goal, up to 110 per cent of the goal.

For the same excess percentages of approved truck crops—carrots, snap beans, lima beans, beets, tomatoes, cabbage, onions and green peas—a payment of $50 an acre will be made.

$189,629,400 Bill

House Votes Funds to 3 Departments

The House last night passed and sent to the Senate a $189,629,400 appropriation bill to finance the activities of the State, Commerce and Justice Departments through the next fiscal year which commences July 1.

Shortly before final passage, the membership adopted by a vote of 177 to 147 a provison sponsored by Representative Andresen (Republican) of Minnesota forbidding the use of any Commerce Department funds for investigation of or promotion of substitutes for dairy products, including oleomargerine.

The House previously tentatively cut $1,500,000 from the $4,500,000 appropriation sought by the State Department to promote its program of improving United States relations with other republics in the Western Hemisphere, but revoked the decision on a later roll call vote.

The tentative action came on a tellers' tally of 113 to 86, despite the protest by Representative Rabaut (Democrat) of Michigan, in charge of the bill for the Appropriations Committee, that the reduction would damage this countrys standing in South America.

The fund already had been cut by the Appropriations Committee from six millions to four and a half millions.

The floor cut had almost solid support from the Republican minority, with Representative Jennings (Republican) of Tennessee arguing that such expenditures as for the contemplated exchange of students and promotion of cultural relations wouldn't help win the war.

OPA Relaxes Prohibition On Nonessential Uses of Steel

Easing its prohibition against the use of steel for nonessential purposes, the War Production Board yesterday authorized limited manufacture of numerous civilian products containing the metal.

The order permits manufacturers to use their stocks of partially or wholly fabricated steel parts in the production of about 20 items, ranging from luggage, to be sold only to Army post exchanges and ship stores, to hair clamps, including decorative clips and fasteners.

Products in which steel already processed may be used include the following:

Millinery wire, beds (except spring frames), cold and warm air registers, awning frames, frames for bags, purses and pocketbooks, linoleum binding, brushes, buckles for shoes, clothing and pocketbooks, buttons for clothing, clothing trim and dress ornaments, nonelectric hair curlers, floor covering trim, hat frames, mechanical bookbindings, and screen frames.

It was estimated that about 3000 tons of steel, "frozen" for periods ranging from three to nine months in manufacturers' hands, will be released.

"These frozen inventories are being released because they consist only of a small tonnage of light gauge steel, not satisfactorily usable in war production or for scrap purposes," WPB said.

"Furthermore, an unreasonable hardship has been created for many small manufacturers who have been unable to liquidate inventories by selling them for war production purposes or for scrap."

WPB also authorized, because of their "essentiality," production of such items as adhesive tape spools and sleeves, wheel-type stretchers, hospital examining tables, cement-making and fertilizer machinery, inked-ribbon spools, keys for opening cans, lobster forks and tongs (for commercial use), inking and stamping pads, street and highway reflectors, and household water softeners.

Steel material in inventories on October 3, 1942, may be used in playground equipment for public recreation and war housing areas. Gymnasium equipment, for programs approved by the United States Office of Education, as well as cleats and spikes for athletic shoes, also may be produced.

D. C. Red Cross Drive Totals $1,869,282

Leading all the large cities of the Nation in percentage contributed, the District Red Cross drive ended yesterday with a total of $1,869,282, or 119.18 per cent of its $1,555,400 goal.

In a "victory luncheon" at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, Campaign Director Randolph Bishop reported that returns since the drive went over the top last Thursday have been the greatest of the entire campaign, which started in the District March 4.

Collections since that time amounted to $182,856 from 16,863 donors, making a total of $361,221 contributors from the entire metropolitan area. Of these, 224,825 were Government employes.

Volunteers Praised

Campaign Chairman A. G. Neal told 200 volunteers from all units that "I can't express to you my proper appreciation for the tremendous job you have undertaken so sucessfully."

"I have endeavored to find a cause for the sudden upward turn of affairs after those grim days of the drive early in March," Neal declared. "The credit rests solely with you who made the collections."

Reports of totals from county divisions yesterday were: Fairfax County, $36,423 or 155 per cent of quota; Arlington County, $30,859 or 152 per cent, with an average of slightly more than $4 per donor; Prince Georges County, $33,104 or 197 per cent; Montgomery County, $55,210 or 118 per cent.

From George F. Buskie of Reconstruction Finance Corporation came the announcement that the Government unit collected $752,181 or 118.4 per cent of the largest quota assigned to any division.

Movie Unit's Share

Neal and Bishop paid special tribute to the War Activities Committee of the motion-picture industry, which yesterday reported $50,000 from theater personnel and collections from movie audiences during the past week. This, Bishop stated, is $20,000 more than ever has been received through similar collections.

Mrs. Oliver Echols, chairman of the booths that opened March 29, told workers that her volunteers received $20,657, or 172 per cent of the $12,000 quota alloted them.

Charles A. Robinson, chairman of the general business unit, announced that his committee received $475,663 from 57,281 donors for 118.9 per cent of the increased goal alloted it two weeks ago, and 152 per cent of its original goal.

18,990 Doorbells Rung

Martin Wiegand of the residential division declared that volunteers rang 18,990 doorbells for more than $207,000, and B. L. Colton of the city division stated that the unit raised 108 per cent of its $163,116 quota.

Bishop emphasized that the headquarters at 1615 H Street Northwest will continue to receive donations until Saturday, when official campaign figures will be tallied and released.

District Chapter Chairman J. Clifford Folger told members that "there will always be a niche in our hall of fame for the man who led us in the greatest campaign in our history—A. G. Neal."

public is expected to subscribe 42 million with banks and other financial institutions buying the rest.

At its meeting in the Willard Hotel, the Rotary Club, warned that "this job must be done, and it must be done promptly," divided its membership into 26 units which will compete for prizes in the job of selling bonds to their firms, friends, families, neighbors and business contacts.

A similar task was entrusted to a special committee of the Lions Club, which, at its weekly meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, heard W. C. Hanson, chairman of the club's war bond committee, describe the magnitude of the job ahead and the necessity of carrying it through.

The Rotary drive will be directed by a central committee headed by Richard Hynson, with Arthur May, Algernon P. Reeves, Harold Brooks and O. E. Reed as the other members.

Robert V. Fleming, member of the executive board of the District War Finance Committee, told the Rotarians that "unless the people buy these bonds, they themselves unknowingly will create an additional tax on themselves" through reduced purchasing power which comes with inflation.

"We haven't a great deal of time," he said. "Our most priceless asset is our youth, and we must preserve as many of those assets as possible" by making quickly available everything needed to bring the war to its earliest possible conclusion.

It was announced at the meeting that Albert W. Atwood, editorial writer for the National Geographic Magazine, had been elected president for the year beginning July 1. Now vice president, he will succeed M. X. Wilberding. Other officers, all chosen at the last meeting, are Howard LeRoy, vice president, and Grant Leet, Dan Holland and Albert H. Lucas, directors.

The Masonic party, according to members of the lodge, has aroused so much enthusiasm that double the $100,000 goal may be raised. Chairman of the program is Dr. Maurice A. Goldberg. Carl H. Claudy, sr., grand master of Masons in the District, will make the principal address; a war hero from Guadalcanal will speak; Lynn Allison of the Capitol Theater will sing and other entertainment will be provided.

At the same time, Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, appealed to all C. I. O. affiliates to support the United States Treasury's current 13 billion dollar war bond drive.

"We must face the fact that the increasing cost of the war is placing additional financial obligations on all loyal Americans," he said. "Your Government must raise additional billions of dollars by sound methods which will not increase our cost of living and dislocate present money values in a way which will penalize all wage earners. Here is your chance to help."

Meantime, the District War Savings Committee announced that Washington had again exceeded its monthly quota of Series E Bonds, selling $7,252,000 during March, or 11.6 per cent more than was assigned to the District. The city has topped its monthly quota continuously since Series E quotas were inaugurated last December 1, and to date has sold a total of $29,790,000 or 10 per cent more than the combined quotas assigned it in the four-month period.

Boy Awarded $5000 For Injury to Eye

A $5000 settlement was made yesterday by the District government in favor of Robert Twynham, 11, 640 Gallatin Street Northwest, as a result of permanent injuries sustained to his left eye when he was struck by a loose wire of a tree guard in front of his home in 1938. Attorney Robert E. Lynch represented the Twynham boy at proceedings before Justice David A. Pine in District Court.

Frankfurter Ceiling Increased by OPA

Because Yanks on distant battlefields don't like their hot dogs squashed, OPA yesterday increased the price of export frankfurters 1½ cents per pound.

The extra money, OPA said, is for wirebound wooden boxes for packing. Similar price increases for Army-Navy purchases included a cent a pound on bologna.

Pay-as-Earn Plan May Be Revived

"As matters now stand, nothing has been accomplished to put this country on a pay-as-you-go basis."

The letter pointed out that when the House took up the pay-as-you-go issue, the parliamentary formalities permitted votes only on the Beardsley Ruml skip-a-year tax plan contained in the bill of Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas, and the "no-abatement" bill of the Ways and Means majority, introduced to the House by Chairman Doughton.

Compromise Idea Favored

No opportunity was given, the letter suggested, to vote on various compromises between the all-out abatement under the Carlson-Ruml plan and the no-abatement Dougton bill.

Revival of the tax legislation under a parliamentary rule that would guarantee a vote on the various compromise partial abatement plans "would be a contribution to the war effort at this time," the petition said.

Doughton and other members of the committee have argued that the House rejected its opportunity to vote for some compromise when it decided to send the Mays and Means majority bill back to the committee, after killing the Ruml Carlson bill. Other members, however, have contended that the vote for recommittal reflected a demand for some compromise plan.

While the petition was circulating, House Republican Leader Martin asked House Majority Leader McCormack whether there would be any House action on the tax issue before the projected Easter recess which leaders are seeking to start at the end of next week.

"I hope so, but I can't guarantee that," McCormack replied. Martin helped lead the fight for the Carlson-Ruml plan. McCormack has urged passage of a compromise plan. All the proposals have included provision for collecting income taxes by withholding-at-the-source as Victory taxes are now collected.

Bricker Would End Rule by Directive

New York, April 7 (INS).—Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, prominently mentioned as a possible Republican presidential candidate next year, tonight called for a return to self-government by the people and an end to what he termed government by "directives."

Addressing the Academy of Political Science in New York, Governor Bricker strongly assailed bureaucratic government, asserting that "formerly when a political problem arose or a public need became apparent we met it by passing a law." Now, he said, "we are living in an era of directives."

Bill to Curb Broker Fees Reported Out

By the Associated Press

A measure to clamp down on "excessive" profits of commission agents on Government war contracts cleared its first legislative hurdle yesterday, gaining unanimous indorsement from the House Naval Committee.

The legislation grew out of a year-long inquiry by the committee into the activities of the agents, representing clients throughout the country and realizing—by their own testimony—aggregate fees of millions of dollars.

The bill, approved by a 16 to 0 vote, defines agents handling War, Navy or Maritime contracts in excess of $25,000 as subcontractors and, as such, subjects their earnings to Government scrutiny and renegotiation.

Support Legislation

Both the War and Navy Departments have backed the legislation. Jacob Davis, special assistant to the Undersecretary of the Navy, declared it was necessary to reach the "unconscionable" profits of agents "of little ability" and those who "have their offices in their hat."

At the same time, spokesmen for both departments and members of the Naval Committee have expressed determination to avoid damaging "legitimate" sales representatives, performing valuable service to small manufacturers and their clients.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia said that it was aimed chiefly at those whom he termed the "5 per cent boys" who obtain contracts with manufacturers on their claims to have "influence" in Governments departments. He said, too, that it would help to recover excessive profits paid in fees on renewal contracts.

Hits Big Salaries

Representative Lyndon Johnson (Democrat) of Texas, while supporting the measure, argued that the committee should direct its attention toward the "$200,000, $300,000 and $500,000 salaries" paid top executives of big corporations doing business with the Government, as well "as the little fellows."

Yesterday's action was the second attempt by the House Naval Committee to restrict the profits of commission agents. The House passed its bill last year to outlaw commission fees on all Government contracts, but the legislation was pigeonholed by the Senate Naval Committee.

Boy, 17, Tells Police He Raped, Killed 4-Yr.-Old Pittsburgh Girl

Buried Little Body In Cellar of Home, Youth Confesses

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 7.—With no outward sign of emotion, a 17-year-old youth told detectives today he had raped, strangeld and buried in the cellar of his home a 4-year-old neighbor girl whom he had rocked to sleep when she was a baby, police said tonight.

Police Lieut. Michael Daugherty said Earl Perry, a candy factory worker, described the slaying of blonde, curly-haired Theresa Williams yesterday afternoon as follows:

"I gave a candy bar and three pennies to 'Cici' (Theresa's nickname). She came into my house and when I fell down the cellar steps 'Cici' laughed. That made me mad, and I hit her twice in the face. Then I choked her.

"After I attacked her, I dug a hole in the cellar. I covered her with dirt and threw water on the dirt to make it tight. Then I tramped down the ground with my feet."

Leaving his home, Perry visited his girl friend, taking her a bouquet of flowers. Later he joined a crowd of neighbors who searched the locality 10 hours for the missing girl.

Daugherty said he charged the youth with murder and took other members of the Perry family into custody as material witnesses "chiefly for their own protection because of the anger of the neighborhood." The family included the parents, two sisters and an aunt of the youth.

Theresa's body was dug up by the fathers of her and Perry after a sister of the youth told them she had seen him digging in the cellar, Daugherty said.

At the sight of the scratched, partly nude body, Adolph Williams, father of the girl, enraged, seized an axe and started up the stairs, but police restrained him.

Mrs. Adolph Williams, the mother, told detectives between sobs:

"I can't understand it. When she was a baby, he (Earl) pushed her baby carriage and carried her in his arms. He even put her to sleep for me many times."

Nazis Deport 3000 More Jews From France

By the Associated Press

Bern, April 7.—A refugee member of the official French Jewish committee said today that the Nazis had required deportation of 3000 Jews from France during March in a new, systematic campaign which brought the total deported to 53,000.

He said the Germans had adopted a new policy of deporting all Jews who are stateless or nationals of countries at war, except Americans and English or dominion.

(The Germans have been eager recently to obtain or retain control of all British and American nationals possible, apparently with an eye to future exchange bargaining.)

In the former free zone of France all Jews arrested are sent to Camp Gurs, near the resort of Pau, rather than into foreign workers companies as previously.

The thousands removed in March left Gurs, a deportation center, in three convoys, the first taking 2400 men from 18 to 65, regardless of physical condition. They were crammed into cattle cars with little or no food and poorly clad, and the committee member said many of them must have died before reaching their unnannounced destination.

A later group consisted of many girls between the ages of 18 and 25.

This source said women, girls and older men who had not yet been interned were being forced to live in segregated villages.

It is known that some Jews are being sent from France to work in Silesia or on Nazi Atlantic Coast fortifications.

Germany, the committee member reported, is not even honoring the nationals of its own Allies in the present campaign, and several hundred Rumanian Jews were deported from Paris recently. The action was taken when Rumanian diplomats in France refused permission for the Jews to return to their own country.

The committee's figures place the number of Jews in France in June, 1940, at 200,000, some 40,000 having left the country during the preceding year. Between June, 1940, and December, 1942, some 30,000 emigrated or left the country as refugees, 35,000 were deported from the former occupied zone and 15,000 from the former free zone. With the recent deportations, this leaves approximately 117,000 Jews in France, of which 90,000 are French.

Of the 27,000 foreign Jews remaining, about 10,000 are in the "occupied" zone and 17,000 in the former free zone. Of the latter, approximately 10,000 already are in internment camps. Many of the 4000 children affected have been separated from their parents, thousands of whom are in hiding.

Taxes: Action

It is incredible that the rout on the floor of the House of all the current plans for new taxation should have left members wondering what to do next. The times call for anything but do-nothingness. Inflation is here, and, if there is any fiscal statesmanship in the chamber which originates revenue measures, that statesmanship should be exercised night and day on ways and means of overcoming it. As a preliminary step we have suggested that the Ways and Means Committee could immediately report out of committee the 20 per cent withholding tax on wages and salaries provided for under the Doughton bill. The committee, however, does not seem in a hurry to move. Perhaps the reason is that it would be impossible to report out any tax measure nowadays without loading it down with some element of Rumlism or counter-Rumlism.

Accordingly we commend action to the House itself, meaning the House leaders. In parliamentary practice a defeated bill can be restored to discussion by unanimous consent. Let this be done in the case of the Doughton bill, and then the House, with the prior agreement of the Majority and Minority leaders, can recommit the bill except the withholding tax, and pass that. There would be no difficulty. For friends and foes of Rumlism are agreed that we must have collection-at-source in order to siphon off at least some of the spending money in excess of available goods which is blowing up the present inflationary breeze into a tornado. No time should be lost. It will take the Treasury two months to apply such a tax, since there would be 200 million blanks to print, aside from the work entailed in preparing the blanks. Thus, if no action is taken within the next two weeks, the system could not be inaugurated by the start of the fiscal year.

Teacher Aid

Several members of the Senate have expressed shock and dismay over the ignorance of American history manifested by college students. Our system of education, not the students themselves, must, of course, be held responsible. If the legislators wish a corrective, they have at least a partial one right at hand in the form of a Federal aid-to-education bill sponsored by Senators Thomas of Utah and Hill of Alabama.

The proposal is modest enough. It would appropriate 300 million dollars of Federal funds for allocation under regular State educational authorities. The distinctive feature of the bill is that two-thirds of the sum would be used for the payment of the salaries of teachers. In order to avoid a reduction in State expenditures for teachers, the bill provides that a State shall receive a Federal allotment only if it continues to pay average salaries to teachers equal to those paid on February 1, 1943.

It is this provision which lays the Thomas-Hill measure open to some degree of criticism. For the salaries paid to teachers in some States are shockingly inadequate. In Mississippi, for example, more than half the teachers earn less than $600 a year. Seven States give their teaching and supervisory employes annual stipends of less than $800. If such States are to share in Federal funds, they should be required to increase their own salary appropriations.

There is every reason to believe that insufficient remuneration for teachers is the root of our educational difficulties. Salaries which do not permit even a subsistence standard of living, let alone indulgence in the luxury of books, simply do not attract to the teaching profession men and women of high caliber. The profession is so ill-paid, indeed, that those engaged in it at the lower levels are leaving in droves for employment at manual labor in war factories. According to a report prepared by the National Education Association, 112,000 teachers left their classrooms from June, 1942, to March, 1943. Some were replaced, of course, by less-qualified instructors. But the NEA estimates that there will be a teacher shortage in this country of 105,000 by the end of this year.

The Federal aid proposal can at least help to arrest this flight from the schools. It is clearly a matter of national concern. For the penalties of ignorance are rarely localized. The whole country will suffer from the social and economic consequences of inadequate education in any of its regions.

Penny-pinching economy in this sphere is certain to entail incalculable costs.

The brave new world for which we hope is not likely to be created by illiterates and ignoramuses. All social progress must lay its foundation on public education of the people who are to share in it. Young men and women who do not understand the nature and meaning of their country's past are ill-equipped to plan its future. Our own planning must begin at the real grass roots—in the elementary schools and high schools throughout the land. The present Federal aid measure represents a step in the right direction. But it is no more than a first step. The States themselves must assume primary responsibility. There is no problem which does not depend for its solution upon the solution of this problem.

Unitas

A critical appraisal of the Treasury's postwar stabilization plan is not possible until monetary experts have had time to study it in detail and announce their findings. However, the public is chiefly interested in the objectives of the program rather than in the methods of attaining them. The important fact is that the Treasury has taken the initiative in outlining plans for stabilizing exchange rates when the war is over. The parties to this plan would no longer be able to change the value of their currencies at will. Changes could only be made with the approval of the managers of the central stabilization fund, and this proviso, by preventing competitive depreciation of currencies, is bound, it seems to us, to be generally acceptable.

Our reason for this statement is world experience with the opposite policy of competitive depreciation of currencies. Before the war the United States and other nations were trying to expand their export trade by reducing the exchange values of their currencies. Such a policy became a boomerang because, with all countries playing the same game, the upshot was to close one economy after another to outsiders.

The new plan looks toward establishing a definite, although flexible, connection between gold and the currencies of the participating countries. By setting up a new international gold monetary unit called unitas, payments between countries could be placed upon a stable gold basis, even though by choice or from necessity the domestic currencies of participating countries might be divorced from gold. The plan also looks toward eventual abolition of systems of exchange control and bilateral clearings. These have been made necessary by the chaotic monetary conditions prevailing throughout the world. Although the disadvantages of these methods of carrying on trade are quite obvious, they are nonetheless necessary evils in the absence of stabilized exchanges that provide trading nations with universally acceptable means of payment.

There is a hard road ahead before any agreement acceptable to all participating nations can be attained. The British, for instance, have just announced the details of a plan of their own for establishing an international clearing union which differs in certain important respects from the Treasury plan. But it is significant that this plan coincides with the Treasury program in the main particular. That is the establishment of an international means of payment which is generally acceptable and which would make the institution of blocked balances and bilateral clearings unnecessary. With both countries agreed that a return to a stabilized system of exchanges is of fundamental importance, it should be easier to deal with the very difficult and delicate questions of the voting strength to be assigned to cooperating countries in the management of any central fund or central clearing system.

Let us, then, assume that differences will be reconciled and a satisfactory method of effecting international payments evolved. That, unfortunately, would not end our problem. Such a system as is proposed is bound to collapse unless postwar trading policies permit goods to move freely between countries and unless impoverished countries are given long-time financial aid that will enable them to buy and sell in world markets at the established rates of exchange. In other words, a system of international payments designed to stabilize currencies is only a mechanism for facilitating a return to orderly world trade. It is in no sense a substitute for the remedial measures required to assure a sound expansion of trade.

Meat Shortage

A curious notion persists that we are short of food because—as some critics put it—"we are trying to feed the world." If we are trying to do this, we have made only a very modest start. Last year a total of 6 per cent of our production of meat, for example, went abroad in the form of lend-lease shipments to our Allies. Another 9 per cent went into the feeding of our own armed services. The balance, 85 per cent of all that we produced, was distributed and consumed right here in the United States by the civilian population.

Even after the demands of lend-lease and the armed services had been met, moreover, we had more meat available for civilians, and actually consumed more of it per capita, during 1942 than during the average year for the period 1935-39. In those earlier years, we were long on meat but short on purchasing power. Now, with full employment and better wages, demand is beginning to outrun supply.

In the year 1943, the Government will need an increased portion of the Nation's meat, in some part for lend-lease, mainly to feed our soldiers, sailors and marines, and for Army reserves. But there will still be left for civilian consumption at least two-thirds of our total production. This will mean a larger supply than the average available for domestic use between 1935 and 1939. But it won't be as much as the food experts in the Department of Agriculture expect that we're going to ask for. It won't be as much, in other words, as we'll have cash in our pockets to purchase.

These are facts which it will be useful to bear in mind when the pinch affects our individual dinner tables. We are doing precious little sacrificing for foreign peoples. We are doing little more, perhaps, for our own men in uniform. In the main, however, we are merely receiving an object lesson in the meaning of the inflationary gap. If we avoid black markets and distribute the available supply equitably, none of us is likely to suffer too greatly. The only remedy lies in reasonable self-restraint.

End In Sight

After his defeat in the Battle of the Mareth Line, Marshal Erwin Rommel chose to make a stand along the water-filled Wadi Akarit some 20 miles north of Gabes. The purpose was twofold. He needed time to reorganize his forces and to replenish his supplies. He was also anxious to prevent a junction between the British Eighth Army pressing north and General Patton's American troops pushing east. How short Rommel is in certain essentials can be gauged by the fact that the Axis has found it necessary to fly in gasoline to Rommel and Von Arnim by transport planes. Eighteen of these transports, together with 13 escorting Axis fighters, were shot down last Monday.

Once again, however, General Montgomery has put a crimp in Rommel's plans. A sudden forward thrust by the British Eighth Army resulted in the capture of two strategic points at the upper end of the Wadi Akarit. So Rommel, finding his position untenable, has again been forced to flee, leaving 6000 of his men behind as prisoners. In the meantime the Americans in the Maknassy and El Guettar sectors continue to edge forward and have made contact with the Eighth Army.

The circle around the Axis is thus shrinking. Allied air power enjoys almost undisputed control in the Tunisian area, and the supply problem facing both Rommel and Von Arnim steadily worsens. There is undoubtedly still a good deal of heavy fighting in prospect in Tunisia. But it is now largely a matter of time before the Axis will have been pried loose from its last position in North Africa.

War Brokers

The House Naval Affairs Committee has brought out some very damaging facts concerning the exorbitant fees paid to manufacturers' agents for their help in obtaining war contracts. These so-called war brokers undoubtedly serve a useful purpose in many cases by acting as go-betweens. They have the knowledge and the contacts that enable them to present the cases of their clients in an effective manner. Such services are especially needed by small firms without experience in working for the Government. However, it is often difficult to draw the line between the bona fide agent of a contractor and the parasitic lobbyist who uses his political or personal pull to grab contracts for clients. And even the legitimate broker becomes a public nuisance when he uses his position to get enormous fees for placing contracts.

Contracting concerns will continue to pay exorbitant commissions as long as such payments can be charged to the Government. Moreover, if the agent has a large number of clients, his annual earnings may be excessive, even if no individual fee is very high. In the long run the Government will, of course, recapture by taxation a considerable part of such agents' fees. But that is not an adequate excuse for overlooking the abuses of the present system. It is hard to convince wage earners, farmers and small salaried people that they must cheerfully make sacrifices for the war effort when they hear of the vast sums paid out to a few lucky war brokers.

The Navy Department is to be congratulated for taking a strong stand in favor of legislative restrictions upon agents' profits. For even though renegotiation of contracts sometimes results in fee reductions, that procedure does not go far enough. If the agents are to be paid only what they are reasonably worth and no more, restrictions must be placed upon the total amount of their earnings. The House Committee on Naval Affairs favors classifying agents who negotiate naval contracts as subcontractors. If that were done, the Navy Department would be in a position to regulate the profits of such agents. Similar safeguards could also be applied to other types of contracts. By such means, together with a system of registration, the Government should be able to stamp out a form of war profiteering exceptionally damaging to civilian morale.

BELOVED, COME HERE TO THE CRADLE

Beloved, come here to the cradle,
See what the night hath brought.
Count them, caress them, Beloved, there are not many;
And rarer than jewels are these babies.
They will flow through our fingers, Beloved;
Let us make certain our hands are clean.
Handle them gently,
They are soft and easily broken.
These are the very last of the Lord.

Minority Peace

By Melvin D. Hildreth

Treaty Power

SHALL it be said that we declare war by a majority of both Houses of Congress, but that peace can be declared by only a minority of one? Article II, Section 2, of the Constitution of the United States, provides that the President "shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur." Thereby hangs a tragedy, a tragedy that has plagued every President from Washington to Roosevelt, a tragedy, however, not entirely unforeseen by the founding fathers. For it was James Wilson, speaking during the Constitutional Convention in 1787, who moved to add after the word "Senate," the phrase "and House of Representatives." In the course of debate, he said, "If two-thirds are necessary to make peace, the minority may perpetuate war, against the sense of the majority." Recently, Senator Pepper has indicated that he would introduce a resolution to amend the Constitution to give the determination of peace to the majority of both Houses.

Certainly our own history is definite evidence of how this constitutional clause has continually handicapped us in foreign relations. Out of more than 300 international acts into which the United States has entered for the purpose of regulating and controlling its communications by mail with the rest of the world, only three have been put into force as treaties. The Universal Postal Union, the Pan American Union and the International Labor Organization were joined by the United States by executive agreement, because it would have been impossible to receive the approval of two-thirds of the Senate. The Senate was unable to function under the handicap of the two-thirds rule in the annexation of Texas, of Hawaii, and of Samoa. The great State of Texas would not be a part of the Union today if we had had to wait for the Senate of the United States to take action. The treaty concluding the Spanish-American War was approved by only one vote. The two-thirds rule governing the Senate's approval of treaties is far from being democratic, and, as pointed out by James Wilson, in time of crisis, it is a peril to the national welfare.

House Now Voiceless

There is an interesting precedent for the consideration of the House of Representatives in treaty matters. Thomas Jefferson had called an extraordinary session to deal with the Louisiana Purchase, and he proposed submitting the treaty of cession and the accompanying communications regarding payments to the House of Representatives in the first instance, as well as to the Senate. Wallace McClure, in his admirably written book, "International Executive Agreements," tells us that Jefferson was dissuaded by his Cabinet members from adopting this course, "in part lest it cause delay and offend the Senate." However, Jefferson stated, Mr. McClure tells us, "that when the instruments laid before it should have received the 'constitutional sanction of the Senate,' they would 'without delay be communicated to the Representatives also for the exercise of their function as to those conditions which are within the powers vested by the Constitution in Congress.'"

Washington was so provoked by this constitutional provision that after he had met with the Senate, in the Senate chamber, "to advise with them on the terms of the treaty to be negotiated with the southern Indians," it is reported that he said "he would be damned if he ever went there again." Certain it is that he never again went to the Senate chamber in regard to treaties.

In 1923, a proposal was submitted to Congress to amend the Constitution so as to permit the consent to the ratification of treaties by a majority instead of a two-third vote of the Senate. As Mr. McClure again points out, "in democratic voting one more than one-half must be decisive; otherwise the minority rules the majority. Constitutional authorization for the President to enter into treaties, provided the Senate by a 2-to-1 vote acquiesces, is accordingly not democratic. Allowing the votes of the opposition to count twice as heavily as those for affirmation places upon international collaboration a handicap that history has shown to be dangerous to public welfare."

Two-thirds Rule

In 1923 John W. Davis, in addressing the American Bar Society, stated: "There can be little doubt historically that the two-thirds rule was dictated in the constitutional convention not only by the prevailing jealousy of executive power but also by the recollection of the requirement under the Articles of the Federation." These articles provided that nine members should pass on a treaty. Nine being two-thirds of 13, that fraction was inserted in the Constitution. It was placed there primarily to protect the New England fishing interests, anxious to save their right to search the sea.

It is absurd that one who votes "no" should have twice the power of one who votes "yes." It is absurd also to say that because one is a member of the House of Representatives, where war is declared by a majority, he shall have nothing to say about a peace which is voted in the Senate by a minority. Majority war and minority peace is not the democratic way.

A survey of the constitutional systems of the world does not reveal a counterpart of our plan of associating only one house of the legislature with the executive in treaty making. "No other great country," says Monroe, "requires a two-thirds vote for treaty ratification." Our Constitution has never been imitated in this respect.

Italy And Allied Air Power

DESPITE Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's latest victory over the Afrika-Korps and the fact that junction has been made between the British Eighth Army and the American forces under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, the Battle of Tunisia is still far from over.

But the Battle of Italy which, was to be the sequel to the final elimination of the Axis from Africa has already begun.

Indeed, from the Axis point of view, the Battle of Tunisia and the Battle of Italy are and always have been one and the same.

HITLER had many cogent reasons for investing a quarter of a million men, at least a fifth of his air strength and a great number of tanks, guns and ships in the Tunisian venture.

He did so to gain time in which to build up the defenses of Fortress Europe.

He gambled, and so far successfully, that as long as he could keep the Allies busy in North Africa he would not have to fight a two-front war in Europe. The current U-boat campaign was designed to achieve the same aim.

But an additional, and very powerful reason why Hitler accepted the Allied challenge in North Africa, even though it was bound in the long run to be a losing venture for the Axis, was the necessity of shielding Italy.

Although it has been the custom in Allied lands to minimize Italy's role in the war, the fact is that Italy's contribution to the Axis has been considerable. So much so, in fact, that if Italy is knocked out of the war Germany's days as a belligerent will be numbered.

HOW IS ITALY to be knocked out of the war? Will it have to be by direct invasion of the peninsula by an Allied force? Or can it be done by air power alone?

An invasion of Italy might prove a costly venture, particularly if undertaken prematurely. First, Sicily and Sardinia would have to be captured. Then, if the landings occurred at some points close to Italy's foot the long march to the north would still have to be carried out.

On the other hand, if the invasion of Italy occurred at some point west of Genoa, thus opening up the Po Valley to Allied occupation, there would still be the barrier of the Alps to surmount before Germany could be invaded. In the meantime Allied concentrations in northern Italy would be subject to attack by German planes based on Austria and southern Germany.

FAR MORE than Germany, Italy is vulnerable to air attack. Her vulnerability stems from four circumstances:

1. Italy's industrial area is not scattered but concentrated. Most of her major industries are located in the Genoa-Milan-Turin triangle.

These cities have already felt the weight of Allied air power based on Britain. Once Tunisia is taken the Allies can multiply these attacks.

In the first place, the air line distance between Tunisia and the Po Valley is shorter than that between England and the Po Valley. And, secondly, weather conditions which frequently make flights across France and the Alps difficult if not impossible, are almost always favorable in the Mediterranean area.

2. Italy's rickety, already overloaded transportation system can be tied up in knots by means of constant attacks on Italy's few major ports, such as Genoa, Leghorn and Naples and her major rail junction points such as Turin, Milan, Mantua, Padua, Bologna, Florence and Rome.

The least self-sustaining of all the major powers, Italy is peculiarly dependent for her continued war effort on unimpeded rail traffic between her and the rest of occupied Europe, especially the Reich.

3. Except for Albania's negligible output; Italy has no oil and must get it overland from the Reich. And Italy lacks the coal from which to make oil synthetically. Her oil shortage is undoubtedly one reason why the Italian fleet has been inactive for so long. Fleets use up vast quantities of oil. The dislocation of Italian transport would further help paralyze her war effort.

4. Italy's morale is already at a very low ebb. The Italians have no heart in the war. Nowhere has bombing had a greater demoralizing effect than in Italy.

FOR ALL THESE reasons there is a strong possibility that a continuous and large-scale Allied air assault on Italy might knock that country out as an effective belligerent. Such an assault, even while fighting continues in Tunisia, is already under way. The fierce daylight raids on Naples carried out by American bombers were primarily designed to disrupt the flow of war material and reinforcements from the Axis to Rommel and Von Arnim. But they also help bring nearer the day when Italy will no longer be able to continue the war.

When that day comes it will not necessarily mean that Italy will sue for peace. As an occupied land she is in no position to do so. But from an asset, even if a diminishing asset, Italy will become a direct liability to the Reich. And Germany, as Hitler well knows, is saddled with more than enough liabilities already.

Home Front Action

Let us all remember that America, our beautiful country, gave us everything we have ever had or ever will have, so we should not delay to act today and do everything in our power to save our beautiful country.

Every minute we lose helps our enemies and can never be regained. Every minute we save makes our glorious victory surer. We must do better. It will be hard indeed for any enemy to defeat us if we go to every production front at once.

Our farms have practically no labor, so let a good many of us go at once and help make and save the food so vital to our defense. Remember that we have only one short season and that is flying by right now. If we lose it this winter we will be starving and our country will be lost.

American women have never failed, they will not fail now. I am 49 years old, but I will never be too old to defend my country. I stand up and work hard and fast all day long. I give every minute of my time and every penny that I make for defense. I count this a very small sacrifice in comparison to one life given on the battle front.

I have read every poem and the majority of editorials carried by The Post since my entrance into the Naval Academy last summer. Prohibition

The lawmakers of the land are at present occupied with the problems of taxation and manpower. But waiting in the wings while these two matters occupy the spotlight is the somber figure of prohibition biding its time. Sooner or later, steps wil be taken to make it a public issue.

From the standpoint of moral discipline, self-command is fostered in a people not by absolute removal of the object of desire but by the healthy exercise of willpower in its presence. This is the lesson of philosophy. It is also the lesson of our historic experience with national prohibition.

Whenever an effort has been made to obtain temperance by law instead of by appeal to conscience it has not only failed but seems to have had the opposite effect. Prohibitionists labor under the fallacy that they can manipulate human souls as easily as the chemist manipulates elements in the laboratory. But the human world is a world of living souls amenable to the laws of God. It is because God has given us the choice to obey or disobey his laws that we are endowed with moral nature.

Great nations have always been founded upon great character. Great character, however, will scarcely be fostered in a people by refusing to expose them to even the slightest temptation. A hardy race taught to govern properly its own passions will be the surest guarantee of a great American Nation.

Tax Politics

In the recent tax discussions we have lost sight of the importance of getting the taxpayer on a current basis. This appears to be of such importance that the Treasury and the Ways and Means Committee should yield to the public wishes, forget the fictitious "forgiveness" of taxes and adopt such a plan immediately. At the moment these gentlemen are on the horns of a political dilemma—to assess two years' taxes at once or to adopt a general sales tax.

The public wants to know whether there is enough fortitude to make a forthright and necessary decision or whether the political consequences are too serious?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Mr. Walker's Wish

("Mr. Frank Walker, chairman of the National Democratic Committee says he would like short conventions and a presidential campaign by both parties on a high level.")

Let's have a very high campaign
To choose a President;
One with no rough stuff in the main,
With every sting unmeant;
A campaign free from dig and bite
Or any unkind touch . . .
(Just grab a strap and hang on tight
If this seems far too much!)

II.

I'd like to see conventions short—
One afternoon would please;
And this idea I warmly court
For, and hand the G. O. P.;
I'd even bar the microphone—
How that would change the style!
(If what I'm asking seems off tone
Just bear with me a while.)

III.

The applesauce and all the bunk
With high and mighty airs,
I'd love to see completely sunk
Especially at theirs!
Why can't we have a quiet time
With good sense, by and large? . . .
(Into the mountains with me climb—
There is no extra charge!)

IV.

Let's have the campaign days quite few—
Just eight or nine or ten,
With all the leaders trying to Behave like gentlemen;
I'd like to see nobody called
A horse thief, crook or jerk . . .
(Of course, I feel I will be stalled—
I fear it will not work.)

V.

With all the world engulfed in war
Why must we long months waste
In making lots of voters sore?
(Let's make 'em sore with haste!)
The higher level I now ask
In air so rarefied. . . .
(Of course I know it's quite a task—
And one that won't be tried!)

VI.

Away with all the dirty cracks!
Scrap all the tomahawks!
Down with the daggers-in-the-backs,
Harpoons, abuse and squawks!
Let's choose a President for once
While showing proper poise! . . .
(I know they'll think me just a dunce
When this gets to the boys!)

VII.

Oh, let us have a Golden Rule
In nineteen forty-four,
With no man called a knave or fool,
A screwball, nut or bore!
Oh, won't both parties act like gents
With mean impulses scant
And go all out for common sense? . . .

No Parking Areas

My office is in Temporary "R" Building. This building is one of a number clustered together at the southeastern end of the Mall and interlaced with streets which carry very little of the city's traffic. Aside from very limited areas reserved for a few employes, there are absolutely no facilities for parking. The large lot on Pennsylvania Avenue between Third and Fourth Streets is not open to the public inasmuch as it is used as a storage space for buses. Every street in the neighborhood is marked with "no parking" signs—yet hundreds of cars are to be seen lined up day after day. It is an accepted rule that if a car owner finds a Metropolitan Police ticket on his car, he automatically tears it up. However, the United States Park Police, who also have jurisdiction, it seems, deals with these infractions in another way: they tow the car to the pound.

I want to register a strong protest, not against the enforcement of the ordinance but against the philosophy that resulted in closing off little-used streets to parking without, at the same time, providing parking areas.

Radio Column

Every morning, often I read The Post, I cut out the "Radio Programs and Highlights" and then pass the paper along to others—who probably total some five or six more readers. I imagine that a number of shut-ins, like myself, do the same thing.

If the make-up of your paper permits placing this radio column in the outside (upper right-hand corner) instead of the inside (left-hand corner), the radio news could be taken out without mutilating the paper in such a way that it is very hard to handle—with the "hinge" gone. Of course practical mechanical reasons may not make this possible, but anyhow, I've had this suggestion in mind for a long time, and now it is off my chest. HERE'S HOPING.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Wendell Willkie's Book

ONLY THOSE who have tried to do it can appreciate how difficult it is to visit a foreign country and come back with any kind of reliable and useful account. And many have found that they do not realize what they have seen until they have been home for a while: when they have eaten the meal, they have not yet digested it.

LIPPMANN

Mr. Willkie's book about his trip to the Middle East, Russia, and China is a case in point: it is a very different affair from the speeches he delivered last autumn when he got off the plane dog-tired and excited. Then his last impressions were his most vivid impressions. Now his many impressions have fallen into a perspective, and the result is a book which places Mr. Willkie, I believe, among the few best American observers who have gone abroad.

MR. WILLKIE had an exceptional, indeed a unique, opportunity in that all the doors were opened to him officially, while he himself and his companions, Mr. Cowles and Mr. Barnes, were free of official commitments. Thus he had the privileges of the insider without the inhibitions. He was able to make a very good use of his privileges because, as this book proves, he has a seeing eye and an understanding heart.

If we ask ourselves whether any man can learn much in 49 days about three great regions of mankind, the answer is that he might learn the thing that matters most at the moment. If he knows what he is looking for, an American aviator in a reconnaissance plane flying over Italy may in an hour bring back information about Italy that matters more vitally at this moment to General Eisenhower than all the knowledge of all the scholars who speak Italian and know the country intimately. That does not mean that Mr. Willkie's book is a guide by which strategy and foreign policy can be formed without much more exhaustive knowledge. But it does mean that even the scholars and the specialists can by reading it make their greater knowledge more relevant and practical.

For it is easy to know so much that you understand nothing. One of our troubles in our dealings with French problems is that there are so many Americans in the foreign service who have lived so much in France that they cannot see France for its cafes, its boulevards, and its salons. One of them, a friend of mine who has lived most of his later life in Paris, wrote me the other day from New York complaining bitterly that I was wrong in insisting that General de Gaulle was the accepted leader and symbol of the French national resistance. His following in France, said my friend, is between 3 and 4 per cent of the people. I wrote back asking him to tell me, now that he was a resident of New York City, what percentage of the people of New York approved of Mayor LaGuardia, and to suggest that he apply to Dr. Gallup for a job.

MR. WILLKIE, it seems to me, is such a good reporter because he exemplifies the advice which the great Burckhardt used to give to the young authors and artists who gathered about him: "Believe me, he alone is interesting who still loves something." Wendell Willkie still loves human beings, not just humanity in general and in the abstract, and he still loves the vast variety of life, and he still loves with personal passion, and not conventionally and by rote, American freedom and the stupendous American faith in what men can be when they are free.

He was, I believe, at his best in Russia. In the Middle East he had deep compassion and in China he had faith and enthusiasm. But in Russia he knew the question to which he wanted the answer. The question was why the Russians exhibit such remarkable energy and loyalty. The answer he found was that Russia today is to a surprising degree a land in which careers are open to talent, and men can rise from the bottom to the top by their own exertions, and obtain honors, wealth, position, and power. That was an unexpected answer for him, I imagine, as it is for most of us, but it is the only answer anyone has brought back which makes any sense at all.

IT IS evident to me that he found this answer because, on the one hand, he liked the Russians and therefore was not afraid of them, and on the other hand, because he knows from his personal experience how opportunity evokes energy. He is a genuine believer in the American way of life. Lots of people think they believe in the American way of life but, in fact, they are infected by the European disease of disillusionment with freedom. Though they say they believe in the American way, they are really scared out of their wits by the Russian way. But not Mr. Willkie. He did not go to Russia with a phobia and an inferiority complex. He went with that complete self-assurance in his own beliefs which is the true foundation of genuine tolerance. For never yet was there a bigot who in his inmost soul was not afraid.

It is no accident, I think, that the two Americans who have come back from Russia with the most reliable account of it have been two self-made men, Mr. Davies and Mr. Willkie. Both have worked their way up through business and the practice of law. Both have practiced in the American way of life and have made a success of it. When they went to Russia, they felt no fear of the bolsheviks and no fear that they might be considered bolsheviks. So they saw Russia with lucid self-respect. They talked with Russians as men ought to talk who are citizens of a great and powerful republic and believe in its institutions and its destiny.

MR. WILLKIE'S book becomes a plea that Americans should learn to understand the shrunken world in which they have to live. But what makes the book so significant is that it is such a good example of how to practice what the argument preaches. For Wendell Willkie abroad remained as American as ham and eggs, as settled in his convictions and indeed confirmed in them as if he had never left Rushville, Ind. Because his American philosophy is so genuine, he did not lose it in foreign lands, but on the contrary, as men of the high American tradition have always believed, found it a good passport to man's confidence wherever he went.

WHITTLESEY HOUSE

Racket Bill Bulwarked

On Eve of Action

By the Associated Press

Chances for amendment of the Hobbs antiracketeering bill to meet objections of organized labor last night appeared to be doomed by action of the House Judiciary Committee yesterday.

On the eve of House consideration of the measure either today or tomorrow, the committee adopted an amendment which might be construed as strengthening language, already in the bill and intended to protect labor's right to collective bargaining and to strike.

Both Representatives Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama, the bill's author, and prolabor members of the committee agreed, however, that the amendment would not satisfy leaders of the American Federation of Labor who recently proposed changes.

For this reason, organized labor was expected to continue its opposition to the bill when it comes before the House, although the committee amendment, it was predicted, might satisfy enough "luke warm" labor legislators to effect passage of the measure.

As originally drafted, the bill contained a section which made it a felony, subject to maximum penalty of $10,000 fine and 20 years imprisonment, any person who, by force or intimidation, should obstruct war production. This section contained a proviso declaring that nothing in the section should be construed as prohibiting labor activities legalized under the Clayton, Norris-LaGuardia, Railway Labor or National Labor Relation acts.

The committee amendment would make this priviso applicable to the entire act which also is aimed at curbing racketeering and extortion for which crimes it proposes the same penalties.

Representative Celler (Democrat) of New York, one of the opponents of the committee amendment, said last night that he would push his amendment, approved by organized labor and intended not only to protect labor rights set forth in the four statutes but as defined by court decisions under those statutes.

The measure undertakes to define robbery and extortion and punish them under the 1943 Antiracketeering Act, Hobbs said it would prevent labor groups from intimidating employers, but labor spokesmen have contended it would sharply curtail union activities now recognized as legal.

Assailed by Pressman

Meanwhile, legislation to curb union activities and outlaw the unionization of managerial workers was assailed by Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C. I. O., as seeking to make all collective bargaining agreements unlawful.

Pressman was the first witness heard by the House Military Committee in opposition to the legislation, which has been advocated by representatives of war industries.

The C. I. O. lawyer told the committee that the bill, introduced by Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, basically "expresses the viewpoint that collective bargaining is not a democratic institution and one to be encouraged, but rather is an institution that must be destroyed."

U. S. Food Cargo For Martinique Diverted to Dutch

Willemstad, Curacao, April 7 (AP). Aneta, the Netherlands News Agency, reported today an official disclosure here that a United States ship, which it said was originally bound for the French possessions of Martinique and Guadeloupe with a cargo of food and general merchandise, had been diverted to Curacao and French Guiana by order from Washington.

Of the ship's cargo, 2277 tons will be unloaded here, Aneta said, and the remaining 308 tons will go t French Guinea which has broken away from Vichy and now is administered by the Giraud-appointed Jean Rapenne.

Aneta added: "Authoritative sources here said the United States Government's action was 'a fine gesture of Allied cooperation' which 'will be greatly appreciated by the population' of this Netherlands West Indies territory."

History Teaching Controversy Called Persecution by Barbee

The controversy over whether American history is to be taught by the social studies method or through facts, names, dates and individual philosophies of American statesmen reached a new boiling point yesterday, when David Rankin Barbee, secretary of the Committee on American History, issued a statement to the press.

He charged that exponents of the social studies method are attempting to persecute the committee's chairman, Hugh Russell Fraser, and discredit him through misrepresentation of facts.

The controversy started when the New York Times last Sunday published the results of a survey of high school students' knowledge of history. They did poorly, and Barbee said exponents of the social studies methods have charged that Fraser promoted the survey with a preconceived knowledge of what the results would be.

Stresses Outlines

The social study method of teaching history lays stress on broad outlines of events and trends in the past, particularly in their relation to the social life in America today. The Committee on American History, on the other hand, believes that a specific knowledge of what took place and the underlying philosphies of the Nation's leaders are necessary as a background for Americans.

The New York Times survey showed that a large percentage of the high school students who answered the questionnaire were sadly lacking in specific information concerning the background of the development of the American governmental system.

Proponents of the social studies system attacked questions in the survey such as: "In what year was the Homestead Act passed."

The committee answers that the date (1862) was an important turning point in American history, since it provided for the opening of free lands in the West and a new means of free enterprise for Americans. They believe that had it not been overshadowed by the contemporaneous Civil War it would be considered one of the most important dates in American history and one which would still be celebrated.

Calls Stories Inspired

Barbee charged that a newspaper article inspired by "social studies extremists" described Fraser as a member of the "Information Service of the Office of Education" when, as a matter of fact, Fraser's qualifications for the movement he is leading are based more upon his authorship of "Democracy in the Making: The Jackson-Tyler Era," which Charles Beard, Claud Bowers and other Pulitzer Prize winners had praised highly. Barbee specifically attacked the New York newspaper PM.

Barbee also charged that the Times survey had been incorrectly represented as solely concerned with names, dates and places.

"How," he asked, "can a question concerning powers granted Congress by the Constitution or rights of an individual as guaranteed in the Bill of Rights be called 'memorizing names, dates and places.'"

He said the social studies method pays little attention to either facts of history or individual philosophies of personalities connected with it.

Fraser said nothing in his own defense, but joined Barbee in attacking the social studies method of teaching history. He said he had examined the curricula of Madison High School at Madison, Wis., and at Eugene High School at Eugene, Oreg., both of which use the social studies method. Nine-tenths of their so-called history courses, he said, deal with nothing but contemporary problems.

Fraser said further: "They seem to believe that history should be a course of indoctrination, rather than the actual story and philosophies of the men who have made America."

Diplomacy's Thorny Task

Buffer State Puzzle

By Wade Werner

Former Chief of the Moscow Bureau of the Associated Press.

Convincing Russia there will be no effort to build a barrier of anti-Soviet states across Europe after the war was viewed in diplomatic circles here yesterday as one of the thorniest problems confronting postwar planners.

That there will be no effort to erect such a barrier was emphasized by Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., in a broadcast last Sunday, when he said:

"Today the idea of a buffer state is as dead as a dodo."

Reactions to Speech

His words were widely interpreted as meaning the United States would not insist on postwar restoration of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania (the Baltic states absorbed by Russia in 1940), or restoration to Poland of eastern areas occupied by Russia in 1939.

In some quarters, however, his assurance was criticized as too narrow to cover the whole range of Russia's postwar security requirements. This view was reflected on the editorial page of the Daily Worker, which frequently follows the Communist line, in an article accusing Berle of advocating the opening of a second front in the Balkans, instead of western Europe, with the idea of using American troops to erect "hostile, Fascist states led by men like Darlan on the borders of the Soviet Union."

On the other hand, Berle's flat statement that the buffer state is a thing of the past, "dead as a dodo," aroused perturbation among representatives of some of the smaller European states, who asked what was to become of them.

"Buffer States"

They drew attention to a dictionary definition of the buffer state as "a country or state, for example Switzerland, which intervenes geographically between larger states and lessens the danger of rupture from immediate contact of their unfriendly elements."

Belgium was cited as an outstanding example of the buffer state, and it was recalled that the pre-1938 Austrian republic was a buffer between Germany and Italy; Albania a buffer between Italy and Greece.

One of the worried diplomats, who asked that his identity be withheld, pointed out that Adolf Hitler's publicly proclaimed excuse for invading Belgium and Holland was that these buffer states were about to double-cross Germany, their powerful neighbor. But the sad history of the League of Nations showed only too clearly, he said, that the series of aggressions which wrecked international efforts to maintain world peace were without exception launched by great powers, not buffer states.

How to reassure Russia without throwing some of the smaller European states into a panic thus appeared to be one of the complexities of the situation.

Biddle Seen As 'Brake'

As Subversives Stay On

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Francis Biddle was accused on the House floor yesterday of slowing up machinery the chamber created 60 days ago to recommend dismissal of Federal employes found to be "subversive."

As restive legislators called for action from the special Appropriations Subcommittee set up to sift charges brought against Government workers by the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities, Representative Jones (Republican) of Ohio, held Biddle to be partially responsible o. the failure of the subcommittee thus far to make a report on subversives to the House.

History of Action

The subcommittee was created February 9 during a House flareup over charges brought by Representative Dies (Democrat) of Texas, against 38 Federal employes. The House had voted to remove from the Treasury Department payroll William Pickens, a Negro specialist in war bonds promotion, who had been called a subversive by Dies. Members later objected that Pickens was being dismissed without having had a chance to defend himself and the vote was reversed. The subcommittee was set up to give Pickens and others on the Dies list a hearing.

Sometime afterward, the subcommittee, headed by Representative Kerr (Democrat) of North Carolina, called for evidence on the alleged un-American activities of employes on the list from the Dies Committee, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other Government agencies.

Evidence Delayed

Thus far complete dossiers of evidence against the employes have been received in only three cases, and Jones blamed Biddle for the delay in obtaining FBI files on the 38 workers. The Attorney General, he said, instructed FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to send the files to him for forwarding to Congress.

"The time has come when we can not be held up any longer," cried Jones, while Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois warned that unless the subcommittee acted soon he would resort to the practice of proposing that names of employes on the Dies list be stricken from payrolls as appropriations bills for the agencies in which they are employed come before the House.

What troubled the House anti-comintern bloc nearly as much as Biddle's alleged dilatory tactics, was the fact that the first, and thus far only, Dies-charged employe to be summoned by the subcommittee took five hearings in which to state his case.

The employe is Frederick L. Schuman, chief political analyst of the Federal Communications Commission.

Representative Anderson (Democrat) of New Mexico, who arose to defend the subcommittee of which he is a member, conceded that Schuman, in answering charges, "has been dealing with matters that are irrelevant," while another subcommitteeman, Representative Powers (Republican) of New Jersey declared:

"If we take as long with each of the 38 witnesses as we have taken with this one, we will be at it for 40 years."

Representative Keefe (Republican) of Wisconsin, stanch Dies Committee supporter, made it clear to the House, however, that much of the subcommittee's time has been consumed in wading through 3-foot stacks of evidence that come to it not only from Dies and the FBI but from Army intelligence, the Civil Service Commission and the President's Interdepartmental Committee.

No "Peanut" Job

"If you think this is a peanut job, you've got another think coming," Keefe protested. "You've got to be patient and give us a chance to bring the facts before this House."

Another delaying factor, it developed, is the Dies Committee itself. The committee has submitted files on 10 of the 38 employes. In recent days it has been conducting hearings of its own, summoning accused employes before it in closed sessions, as is the practice of the Appropriations Subcommittee. Some House members believe the committee is not satisfied that evidence in its files against some employes is conclusive and desires to strengthen it before submitting information to the subcommittee.

The subcommittee, following the outburst in the House, concluded hearings on the Schuman case yesterday afternoon and set down for hearing charges against Goodwin Watson, $6500 Federal Communications Commission broadcast analyst. It is expected to finish with Watson and one other accused employe next week.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Significance of Eden's Conversations Here

CABINET MEMBERS who talked with Foreign Minister Anthony Eden during his visit here were more impressed with his vision and grasp of world problems for peace than those of any other British statesman who has been here in years. Churchill has never seemed to worry much about peace, concentrated on winning the war.

Eden, however, had one great worry. He didn't say so outright, because every British diplomat remembers the Sackville-West incident in 1888, when a British minister was recalled from Washington for favoring the election of Grover Cleveland. However, reading between the lines of Eden's conversation one could see that he was definitely worried over the possibility of an isolationist Republican victory which might scuttle the peace after the war.

This was one reason he took such pains to talk to leading Republicans.

One or two Administration leaders, incidentally, did not allay his fears. They took a very frank view, to the effect that the political situation was bad, and told Eden that a Democratic Administration would have a tough time being re-elected.

British-Russian Alliance

TO GET THE full significance of Eden's conversations it is important to remember that before 1940 the pillar of British foreign policy was close cooperation between the British navy and the French army. The French were to dominate the Continent and the British the high seas.

To strengthen this, the Frenh had built up a series of alliances, or buffer states—Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Yugoslavia, Rumania. But when Hitler chopped out the weakest link, Czecho-Slovakia, the entire structure fell, and with it the French army.

It is no secret, therefore, that Britain, since the fall of France, needs a new ally in Europe and that new ally will be—In fact, already is—Russia.

That is the most important point to keep in mind about Eden's conversations here. That is one reason why the British frankly told us that they will handle European matters and that all questions of future boundaries of European states, especially those like Poland, Rumania and the Baltic States bordering Russia, must be left until after the war. Also the clear indication is that Russia and Britain can settle these problems.

Another argument to that end is that the State Department, because of Polish, Slav, Baltic minority groups in this country, is under political pressure and can expeditiously pass the buck to England, keeping hands off completely.

Wants Us to Join

THE BRITISH-RUSSIAN alliance, however, is not secret. The United States has been urged to join, and Eden even hopes that the President will soon send an outstanding statesman to Moscow.

Russia, it was quite clear from the Eden coversations, is a country which cannot be ignored in peace any more than in war.

This was probably the No. 1 conclusion of the Eden visit. No. 2 conclusion was that world peace can be maintained only by a military alliance of Britain, the United States, Russia and, perhaps, China, almost identical to the military alliance proposed by Woodrow Wilson but rejected by the die-hard isolationists in the United States Senate.

In other words, instead of hemming and hawing over League sanction against Manchuria, this military alliance would have acted first and talked afterward. In other words, also, after 20 years and 2 wars we are back where we were before the die-hards killed Woodrow Wilson's dream of peace.

Jed Johnson Shocked

Jesse Jones' financing of a huge Aluminum Corp. power plant in Canada while United States power projects were being sidetracked came in for criticism during a hearing of the House Appropriations Subcommittee the other day. The committee had before it Paul J. Raver of Portland, Oreg., head of the Government's huge Bonneville Dam which supplies power to a United States aluminum project nearby.

Asked Representative Jed Johnson of Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee: "Did you read the story about Jesse Jones lending that money to the Aluminum Corp. to build a Canadian power plant?

Raver: "Yes, I read it."

Johnson: "What do you think of it?"

Raver: "I don't think it sounds very good for the authorities here, who are denying materials to power plants in the Northwest (Bonneville and Grand Coulee), and at the same time are sending stuff to Canada.

"Bonneville and Grand Coulee supply the power for about one-third of our aluminum production, but they are not operating at full capacity because they lack equipment and can't get alumina (the ore). When the Canadian plant was being built, we were told we couldn't go ahead with full production because of the shortage of critical materials.

"We have been operating Bonneville on a shoestring. We can't get fire hydrants and other materials necessary to protect the plant."

Johnson: "I can think of worse things to say. Here we are closing down power projects and reclamation projects in the United States and at the same time 68 million dollars of the taxpayers' money is going to build a plant for the Aluminum Corp. in the wilds of Canada, without interest. I'm shocked and amazed.

"As a postwar proposition, the Aluminum Corp. will have a great plant in Canada employing thousands of people financed by the United States taxpayers."

Representative James M. Fitzpatrick of New York "It may be possible that the Aluminum Corp. doesn't want any surplus power in this country because it would interfere with the power trust."

Representative Johnson: "I've heard that they're using aluminum to make chairs in Canada, though we can't get enough of it for war needs in the United States. I'm shocked by what I have read about this loan Mr. Jones made and I think this committee should find out who's to blame for it. Unless someone gives a good reason for it, I'm going to raise some cain. I think this committee should get at the facts."

Note: Representative Coffee of Washington has now introduced a resolution to investigate the sidetracking of United States power projects. He stated "I want to know how Aluminum, Ltd., obtained such good terms and why this agreement was kept secret so long."

Nats Coast to 10-to-8 Verdict Over Middies

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Annapolis, April 7.—Men who played football as Annapolis midshipmen are now running the show for the Navy in the warring on the seven seas, which is why the Naval Academy has stepped up its sports program beyond peace-time bounds.

POVICH

"It's nonsense to think you have to be a football player to be a hero, said Capt. John Whelchel, the Academy's director of athletics. "But you know," he added, "it looks like football helps."

It is, seemingly, more than a coincidence that the top admirals in the United States war effort thus far have a football background at Annapolis. Admiral William Halsey, commander in chief in the Southwest Pacific, was the greatest ground gainer in the Navy backfield during the 1904 season. Admiral "Ike" Griffin was a swell halfback for Navy. He led the United States fleet into Casablanca at the outset of the North African business.

Another former Navy football player is Mike Moran. He's Capt. Mike Moran, of the U. S. S. Boise, the cruiser that knocked off seven Jap ships in the battle of Java Sea. Admiral Ernest King, commander in chief of the whole works for the Navy Department, made his football "N" as a member of the B squad.

Lieut. Buzz Borries, Navy triple-threater of more modern times, is now an instructor at the Pensacola, Fla., air base. He was decorated for knocking down seven Jap planes. Lieut. Slade Cutter, field goal star of a decade ago, will soon receive command of one of Navy's new submarines. Cutter was second officer on the sub that lay in the bottom of Tokyo harbor for weeks and emerged at intervals to sink a dozen Jap ships.

A recent visitor to his alma mater here was Ensign Joe Sliwka, a lineman on the 1940 team. Sliwka came to the Naval Academy as a Polish lad out of the Pennsylvania coal mine districts. There was a raising of eyebrows when he applied for appointment. "I knew he'd make a good officer" said Lieut. Rip Miller, the former Notre Dame center who is now Navy line coach. "When I interviewed him, I found him studying under an oil lamp."

Sliwka was furloughed from the U. S. S. Chester, which was considerably mixed in the action in the South Pacific. "I saw braver men than myself 'freeze up' when the action started "Sliwka told Miller. "The only reason I didn't was because of my football training. It taught me how to withstand shock and react to it. I was probably just as scared as the rest, but my reflexes worked."

To understand the shock that can occur in battle, consider the effects of merely the concussion that follows the firing of a big gun. "I've seen it rip the coat off a man's back," said Captain Welchel. "The concussion can knock your head against the bulk head and knock you cold. Only the men with the better reflexes react well."

These are just a few of the reasons why the Navy is differing violently with the Army in its sports programs. The Navy is permitting its apprentice seamen in the V-12 schools set up in dozens of colleges to partake of varsity sports while the Army has tabooed varsity sports for its men in the A-12 schools.

"We don't think there's anything better than body contact sports for war-time training," said Welchel. "The Army can have its own opinion, but we are going along with a stepped-up sports program. An hour's football scrimmage is at least as good as the Army's commando training."

West Point people are not in favor of the War Department's deemphasis of sports in the training program of the Army men studying technical courses at the various colleges. They blame it on fuddy-duddies in the War Department who almost wrecked the Army football schedule last year.

The word went out, in fact, that West Point should cancel its 1942 football schedule, including the Army-Navy game. Navy men saw a threat to their own football schedule and went to Secretary of the Navy Knox in panic. Knox took the subject of service academy football direct to President Roosevelt, got an okay for the Army-Navy game, and probably saved football at both institutions.

After the war, the Naval Academy will probably beat the tar out of West Point football teams for several years. Annapolis will have tabs on the thousands of Navy men in training at the civilian colleges, a backlog of talent that West Point won't own because somebody in the War Department can't get the idea that varsity sports is good training.

The four Dusek Brothers of wrestling fame, all have children and there's not a boy in the station-wagon load. . . . Speaking of wrestlers, Strangler Lewis (at Turners tomorrow. adv.) is a great fight fan . . . he has seen all the big battles of the last 30 years . . . says Jess Willard was the most underrated of heavyweights . . . Strangler says his favorite was Jack Dillon . . . and I second the motion . . . standing only 5 feet, 5 inches and weighing a chunky 175 pounds, Dillon used to climb up the giants' legs and knock them out . . . it Art Brown hasn't been any too lively of late, it's because he lost a real pal of 15 years last week with the passing of his big Chow dog . . . since this point ration on meat went into effect, butchers are getting their fill of family talk . . . every other woman has something to say—"Now my husband says save the points" and "They invited us to their house before meat was rationed. Should I ask them to bring their ration books?' and 'Grandpa is getting to be a problem. He can't eat pork and darned if I'm going to get two points' worth of hamburger."

Some years ago the opposition was getting our early sports sheet and rewriting little scoops we might have . . . One night we inserted in a small run of papers a story with the heading "Nats Buy Pitcher Nelots Swen" . . . Imagine somebody's surprise when they discovered, too late, that the hurler's name was "Stolen News" spelled backwards . . . Or have I written that before . . . With horse racing conspicuous by its absence during most of last winter, dog racing went big in Miami . . . Jockey George Napier is reported still in the hospital at Hot Springs with a broken leg . . . Like many other track accidents, Napier was hurt when pulling up after a race . . . On last Sunday's "The Army Hour" broadcast, the general at Aberdeen was doing the talking and explaining the sound of ammunition . . . For instance, there was a big "boom" and he said, "That was the 10-inch gun" . . . Then he said, "We will now compare a company of 1918 infantry with the present-day infantry. Listen to the 1918 infantry——" . . . There was a pause and not a sound came over the radio . . . Then the general continued, "Now listen to the 1943 infantry" . . . There was a volume of firing and the general came back with, "Notice the difference?"

When Pimlico opens on April 16, the parking lots will be open but autoists will use them at their own risk . . . the sports department settles or tries to settle various sports arguments . . . I promised somebody to find out if Strangler Lewis ever wrestled Frank Gotch . . . Strangler says No and that Gotch had retired before he came up . . . every year about this time the guys and gals begin phoning to ask, "Who won the Kentucky Derby in this year and that year?" . . . and we miss Pete Marshall, the telegraph operator, who was a human file on the horses and dates . . . by the way, the Government long since asked newspapers not to give out sports results . . . kinda makes you hot under the collar to hang around an overheated ration board office, begging for fuel oil . . . what are they trying to do—convert Pop into Popsickles?

Well, Boss, I have to quit. Mary is circling me with the vacuum cleaner and that definitely means "Git out."

Grid Pros Will Carry 25 Players

Free Subs Rule Adopted Although Coaches Protest; Dorais Absent

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Club owners of the National Football League cut the player limit today from 33 to 25 to meet manpower difficulties, and voted to permit free substitutions of players in-and-out of games for the 1943 season against the wishes of most of the coaches.

Elmer Layden, league commissioner, said man mileage would be reduced more than 37 per cent by adoption of the 25-player limit and a cut in the schedule from 55 to 45 games, which was agreed upon tonight.

Each team will engage in round-robin competition with the other eight clubs and in addition will play two other contests with traditional rivals, a total of 10 games for each league member. A rough draft of the revised schedule failed to satisfy the owners, however, and Layden was commissioned to prepare a chart and submit it later for approval by mail.

Reduction of the player limit brought about the change in the substitution rule. Heretofore the league has permitted a player to enter a game only once each period, except in the final period when two players might reenter at once. The new ruling corresponds to that in collegiate football.

Coaches Opposed

The pro coaches argued against making the rule permanent, and were of the opinion that it was against the best interests of the professional game. They said it would make players like Sammy Baugh, Don Hutson and Cecil Isbell eligible for free substitution and would permit them to reenter contests at times when their aerial magic could result in quick touchdowns.

In agreeing to reduce the player limit some of the club owners said they did not believe any of the nine teams would be able to carry 25 players throughout the season. Curley Lambeau, coach and part owner of the Green Bay Packers, said, however, that he was of the opinion that he could muster at least 150 players if necessary.

Originally, when the league was organized in 1920, the player limit was 18. It was increased to 22, then to 25 and finally to 33 in 1940.

Dorais Absent

Charles (Gus) Dorais, new coach of the Detroit Lions, will be unable to attend tomorrow's draft session, at which 200 graduating collegians will be selected. Dorais has been undergoing hospital treatment in Detroit for a skull fracture and his physician refused permission to him to make the trip. Fred Mandel, owner of the Lions, will be present, however.

Koslowski, Swim Star, Joins Army

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Henry Koslowski, the Northwestern University freshman who recently established a world record in winning the National Collegiate Athletic Association 50-yard free style swimming title, was called to active Army duty today and will report at Fort Sheridan Saturday.

Rep. Hartley Plans Further Changes in D. C. Boxing Bill

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer

Further changes in the proposed revised D. C. boxing bill, on which hearings opened yesterday before the House District Subcommittee, were promised yesterday by Representative Fred Hartley of New Jersey, "Father of Boxing in Washington."

The present revised bill was drawn up by Richmond B. Keech, District corporation counsel, and sponsored by Hartley after the Comptroller General recently ruled that under the present setup the boxing commission's levy of 10 per cent "gate" tax, which the public pays, is illegal. Among the provisions in the revised bill is an item which provides the boxing commissioners shall receive a per annum salary of not more than $3000.

One of the major defects of the revised bill, Hartley believes, is the fact that it does not specify, as in the present law, that a member of the District Police Department shall be included among the three boxing commissioners.

This, he declares, will be remedied. In fact, he is going to insist upon it. He told The Post yesterday:

"I am going to insist that a member of the Police Department be included on the commission. This revised bill must stipulate that. If it doesn't, I am going to do my best to beat my own bill.

"Lieutenant Agnew (Commissioner Police Lieut. John J. Agnew) has served the District boxing commission faithfully and well. You can't ask more from a man than that."

Agnew will be unable to accept a salary as commissioner because of a ruling which forbids an official of the District of Columbia from accepting another salary.

Initial hearings on the revised bill yesterday amounted to little. Minor details and technicalities were clarified.

Hoyas Hold Golf Tryouts At Columbia

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Golf will be the most popular sport in the local collegiate ranks this year, with both Georgetown and George Washington represented officially by four or six man teams, while Catholic U. will conduct the sport on an informal basis.

All Georgetown students who hold club handicaps of 10 or less will qualify next Tuesday and Wednesday at Columbia Country Club for a team to play an abbreviated schedule of local matches.

The Hoyas, along with Harvard, Yale and Brown, dropped out of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf League this year and other teams may follow suit. The league plans to hold a 36-hole one-day championship May 8-9, probably in Philadelphia. The University of Pittsburgh is sounding out schools on the possibilities of holding a two-day National Collegiate Championship in June.

Barse Entered

Three of the Hoyas who will play in the tryouts are members of Columbia: Joe Barse, District junior champion, George Rita and Paul Stewart. G. U.'s outstanding player is Jack Donohue, the senior from Sioux City, Iowa, who was runner-up in the District Amateur Championship three years ago and who has won several tournaments in his home State, including the Tri-State Open. Donohue is awaiting a Navy call, however, and may not be available.

Reid Halla, Detroit junior champion, and Jimmy Phelan are other Hoyas who figure to make the team. Joe Gardner, graduate manager of athletics, will conduct the trials.

George Washington will hold its trials at Kenwood Country Club with Bill Myers, the Colonials' director of physical education, in charge. Bob Groetzinger, captain of the G. W. team, set up a golf net in the gymnasium where team members have been practicing.

Groetzinger is the logical number one player but he will have opposition from two members of last year's championship Roosevelt High team, Bill Brownrigg and Charles Griffin, jr. Dick Steadman, Scott Gudmundson and Jim Rausch, the football and Indianapolis, April 7.—Harry Edwards' homer over the right field wall in the last half of the ninth gave the Cleveland Indians a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in an exhibition game here today. It was their first victory in three games with the Buccaneers.

Hank Gornicki blanked the Indians for five frames, but Harry Shuman lasted only one round when three American League blows tied up the score. Jack Hallett finished and yielded two hits, including the roundtripper which beat him.

Lou Boudreau, who got two singles, was the only player to get more than one safety.

Dodgers Beat Yale, 2-1

New Haven, Conn., April 7 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers encountered unexpected opposition from Red Rolfe's Yale baseball team today but won out in the ninth inning, 2 to 1. All the scoring came in the ninth inning when Bob Brutcher, who pitched the last four innings for Yale, weakened and yielded two runs on a single hit.

Al Sherer walked and scored the first run on Johnny Cooney's sacrifice and Paul Waner's single. Then Augie Galan also drew a pass and was forced by Joe Medwick but when the Elis tried for a double play Waner came home. Yale's run was scored off Sherer in the last half of the inning when Smith was hit by a pitched ball, Brancaro singled and Alex Kampouris made a wild throw on Stack's grounder.

Yale made only four hits off Kirby Higbe, Bob Chipman and Sherer while Bill Cahill, Yale's first pitcher, blanked the big leaguers with four hits in the first five innings.

The white washing ran the Birds' consecutive scoreless inning total to 27. The Orioles dropped two previous games to Boston and the Norfolk Naval Training Station team without making a run.

The American Leaguers thus took the rubber game of the informal three-contest training camp series with their home-town rivals.

Rookie Frank Kalin, late of Hollywood, connected for the circuit with two on board in the fifth in a seven-run uprising that routed the Cubs' young Eddie Hanyzeewski. Derringer and Bithorn were the other mound victims.

St. Albans Nine Beats Colts, 5-2

Behind the five-hit pitching of Steve Cromwell, the St. Alban's baseball team opened its season with a 5-2 victory over the Calvin Coolidge nine yesterday.

After spotting the Colts a pair of runs the Saints came back to tally a pair in the fifth, one in the sixth, and two more to cinch the outcome in the seventh. Jimmy Trimble was the big gun for the winners gathering a trio of hits in four tries and turning in a very creditable performance at shortstop. He handled five chances without the sign of a miscue.

The Colts had a lot of tough luck, most of it coming to their pitcher Bob Holzberlein. In the second inning he failed to touch third base on route home and was called out costing his club a run and ending a Coolidge rally. He further defeated his own cause with costly errors. Once Holzberlein threw to third when it was not covered and another time, with a double play in sight, he threw into right field. Coach Bob Masterson, however, was very pleased with his work on the hill and the play of Bob Webb, his battery mate.

Walks and Doubles Give Majors Lead; Bluege Gives Subs Chance at Annapolis

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., April 7.—A lonely figure "8" went up on the scoreboard for the Nats in the first inning following a procession of bases on balls, and the Washington club achieved an easy 10-to-8 victory over the Naval Academy this afternoon.

John Williams, Annapolis pitcher, walked the first six Nats to face him in the opening inning, forcing three runs across the plate. At that point Navy Coach Max Bishop surmised that Williams lacked control and withdrew him from the box.

The Nats required only two hits to get their eight runs during the inning, Jake Early's double, and another two-bagger by Ellis Clary. Early's blow was a wind-blown pop fly against the short right-field screen.

Mueller Improves

After Williams retired, with three runs across the plate and the bases still full, Dale Mueller took up the pitching for the Midshipmen, and was the victim of the blows by Early and Clary. In the later innings, however, Mueller pitched creditably against the major leaguers.

Jim Mertz, right-hander from Atlanta, made his debut on the mound for the Nats, pitching the first four innings, in which he allowed three hits and one run. Watson drove the run across the plate with a long double atop the bank in left field to score Jacobus, who had drawn a walk.

The Midshipmen pounded Alex Carrasqual, veteran Nat hurler, for six hits in the sixth and seventh that netted six runs.

Subs Get Chance

After the fifth inning, Manager Ossie Bluege withdrew his regulars and substituted virtually an entire team.

Grosso Stars As Red Wings Score, 4 to 0

Boston, April 7 (AP).—Don Grosso performed the three-goal "hat trick," a most difficult feat in playoff hockey, while personally conducting his Detroit Red Wings to a 4-0 shutout over the Boston Bruins in their third Stanley Cup final match tonight before an overflow crowd of 14,880 at the Boston Garden.

The Wings, eager to end matters in four straight games, threw terrific force against the Bruins at the outset and during the fourth minute of one-sided play, Don Grosso, from the edge of the crease, batted in Eddie Wares' rebound for the first goal.

Grosso scored again for Detroit at 10:16 when, while Defenseman Jack Crawford was in the penalty box.

The Red Wings protected their 2-0 advantage all through the second period, although they were outplayed by an impressive margin most of the way. After repeatedly storming Mower's net, Bill Cowley directed the puck through the crowd to Murph Chamberlain, who drove it hard against a net post. The crowd thought the puck had gone in and out of the net and roared its objections when the red light failed to blink. Grosso made it three goals for the night in the final period.

Derby Hopes In Inaugural $5000 Race

New York's 180-Day Season May Equal Banner Year of '42; 18 in Feature

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, April 7.—The lid pops off New York's 180-day racing season and some of the fancier Kentucky Derby eligibles in one single "pop" tomorrow at Jamaica.

The Empire State campaign starts with a card headed by the $5000 6-furlong Experimental Handicap, which drew a field of 18 3-year-olds today. Thirteen of these are Derby hopes and two of them—Blue Swords and Slide Rule—are regarded as more than just "guys named Joe" for the big pot at Churchill Downs on May 1.

Should Equal 1942

In spite of the wartime headaches, all signs point to another campaign in these parts which will come close to changing the New York State "flower" from the rose to the two-buck bill. State Racing Commissioner Herbert Bayard Swope even says he doesn't see any reason why the State's revenue from the oat-burners shouldn't be as big as 1942, when the Treasury took 10 million dollars from total betting of some 175 million dollars. Officials are looking for a drop in attendance, particularly since parking areas at all tracks will be closed to automobiles.

Naturally, the way the Derby eligibles do or don't go holds the spotlight tomorrow. Blue Swords, winner of $35,065 last year and pride and joy of Allen T. Simmons, the Akron horseman, is second choice only to Count Fleet in the Derby books. Slide Rule, also a stake winner in 1942, took on added prominence last week when his stablemate, Devil's Thumb, was sidelined from the Derby by an injury, leaving him as the "varsity" from the barn of W. E. Boeing, the "Flying Fortress Man" from Seattle.

First Outing

Blue Swords is top weighted under 126 pounds, 6 more than Slide Rule. It will be the first outing of the year for each of the colts.

Of the Derby candidates who saw winter action, best-liked is Mrs. A. R. Smith's Through Bound, particularly since the 6-furlong sprint distance of the experimental figures to "fit" him better than either Blue Swords or Slide Rule.

Also given some derby consideration, and entered for tomorrow's dash, are Mrs. Payne Whitney's pair of Four Freedoms and Famous Victory; Mrs. Barclay Douglas' Eurasian; W. L. Brann's Maryland hope, Vincentive; Mrs. Vera S. Bragg's Gold Shower, and William Woodward's Bossuet, who is coupled in the betting with Tip Toe. The other Derby eligibles are John Coburn's Towser, Gus Ring's Hasteville and Lazy "F" Ranch's Royal Nap.

Government Softball League in Meeting

The first meeting of the Government Softball League will be held at Garnet-Patterson Junior High School, Tenth and U Streets Northwest, on Tuesday, April 13, at 8:15 p. m. All Government departments, both Federal and District, are asked to send representatives to this meeting. Plans for the organization of the league will be discussed at this meeting. Softball rules and fundamentals of play will also be discussed.

Wakefield Kicks in Runs, Knocks in Runs for Tigers

Michigan Collegian Is Powerful at Bat But Weak Afield; O'Neill Has Faith

By the Associated Press

Evansville, Ind., April 7.—Baseball's super-salesman, young Dick Wakefield, is having trouble these days peddling his wares as a major league outfielder, but he has thoroughly sold the Detroit Tigers on his power hitting.

Wakefield is a smooth article when it comes to selling himself and he'll probably do something about those fielding lapses, but privately he is causing some concern in the inner councils of the Detroit organization. At current standards, he may boot in as many runs as he bats in.

The 21-year-old University of Michigan collegian, who in 1941 received a record $52,000 bonus from the Tigers after making a sales tour of half a dozen major league parks, is batting a cool .412 in exhibition encounters. He has hammered in nine runs and kicked in half a dozen with unsteady fielding.

It bothers Wakefield to no small degree.

"Just Wakefield booting another one," said the young man the other morning as he dropped a breakfast roll from the table.

Manager Steve O'Neill., who piloted Wakefield last summer at Beaumont, believes the youngster will be all right when he gets the sun out of his eyes. After all, Steve contends, Wakefield didn't win the Texas League's 1942 most valuable award merely for capturing the batting title. Furthermore, playing the sun field takes experience.

Essentially though, Wakefield is a ball player of the early Ted Williams type, whose sole concern is batting perfection, let the enemy base hits fall where they may. Williams got so he did a passable job in the outfield for the Boston Red Sox, and maybe Wakefield's fly-chasing will improve as he gathers base hits.

The Tigers think he will get plenty of the latter.

G. U. Awards 12 Players Cage Letters

Twelve players and the manager who helped Georgetown University to its most successful basketball season in history were announced as letter winners yesterday by Father John J. Kehoe, S. J., faculty moderator of athletics.

In addition to the 10 players who made up the squad when Georgetown won the N. C. A. A. Eastern Championship, Andy Kostecka, now in the Army, and Lane O'Donnell, in G. U. Medical School, received sweaters.

The others were John Mahnken, big center whose 415 points set a new District record, cocaptains Danny Kraus and Billy Hassett, Lloyd Potolicchio, Jim Reilly, Bob Duffey, Frank Finnerty, Henry Hyde, Bill Feeney, Danny Gabbianelli and Jerry Dywer, manager. Hassett resigned from school yesterday and returned to his home in New York while Kraus received orders to report to the Army next week.

Elmer Ripley, who ended his fifth straight year as coach in addition to his two years in the late 20's, returned to his home on Staten Island yesterday with the hope of returning after the war to the boys who made up G. U.'s greatest court squad.

Top Fillies Entered in Pimlico Oaks

Entry List of 40 Is Record; $10,000 Added Event Set May 5 at Pimlico

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 7.—Virtually every one of last season's juvenile fillies was eligible today for the $10,000-added Pimlico Oaks to be run at the Maryland Jockey Club's oval in Baltimore on May 5.

The race, richest of the spring season exclusively for 3-year-old fillies, this year shapes up as another classic—with less pomp and less money—to be added to the famed triple crown contests.

Fillies in the past have had little success against colts in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness—a fact which apparently induced a number of owners and trainers to pass up those two rich races in favor of the Oaks.

Largest Entry

Maryland Jockey Club officials said the list of 40 fillies eligible for the race was the largest in the 20-year history of the event.

The Oaks is run at a mile and one-sixteenth under equal weights.

Hal Price Headley's Askmenow, almost universally acclaimed as the 2-year-old fillie of last season, heads the list of eligibles. She is no stranger to Maryland crowds, having romped off with the rich Selima Stakes at Laurel Park last fall.

Askemenow's most notable race, however, was one she didn't win. That was the Belmont Futurity, in which she and the speedy Count Fleet matched strides for virtually the entire distance, while Occupation ran away with the first money. Askemenow, however, took second money from Count Fleet, the winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

Falaise Eligible

The fillies which ran second and third to the Headley color bearer in the Selima are also eligible for the Oaks. They are Falaise Stable's Good Morning and King Ranch's Too Timely.

Other fillies nominated for the Oaks, which was won last year by Belair Stud's good filly Vagrancy, include Anthony Pelleteri's La Reigh, Wheatley Stable's Navigating, George D. Widener's Stefanita and Joseph E. Widener's Fair Weather. All were stake winners last year.

A full sister of gallant old Challedon, now retired to stud, is also eligible. She is William L. Brann's Challedonna, sent to the races only a few times last season.

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 7.—The National Boxing Association, which may add New York to its list of member States if Tex O'Rourke, one of the N. B. A. founders is appointed to the New York Commission, has opened two worthwhile charity drives.

CONSIDINE

One drive is aimed at supplying our men in uniform with the equipment which every camp is demanding. Apparently there is a woeful shortage and a great need, especially for gloves.

The other drive is for boxing's welfare fund, a struggling N. B. A. charity which hopes to take care of indigent boxers. No sport needs such a fund as much as does boxing.

In a letter to the 38 commissioners of the member States, President Abe Greene, of the N. B. A., writes:

"Boxing's service athletic fund is boxing's specific contribution to the morale of the services. If you could read the letters of appeal from morale and special service officers in camps throughout the land and overseas, you would be up in the front lines of enthusiasm yourself to be sure your State was lined up in the case.

"If your boy were in the service somewhere away from home—perhaps in Tunisia, or New Guinea, or Australia—and he made an urgent appeal to you for boxing gloves, punching bags, ropes to skip with, perhaps even a boxing ring, would you hesitate a moment to dig up the money to buy these things? Well, kids like your boys are asking for such equipment every day. The Government provides a certain amount, but not nearly enough. It's up to boxing to do the rest.

"I want you to measure for yourself, from a purely personal and selfish viewpoint, the great value to boxing from encouragement of the sports among millions of soldiers.

Greene says that such gifts will bear fruit. Out of the armed forces, he is certain, will emerge a number of colorful champions, plus an untold number of new boxing fans, stimulated by service boxing.

As for boxing's welfare fund, it has never been big enough to enable boxing, like baseball, to say that it takes care of its own. Greene pulls no punches in asking commissioners to line up charity shows for this cause.

"Boxing has been woefully lacking in the care of those who gave the sport everything they had and found themselves destitute and in many instances physical derelicts when they outlived their usefulness. Boxing has been too busy draining the best from the boys, and the boys in turn have been too busy with the excitement of the present to think of the future.

"As a result the bent ear and the broken nose, the puffed eye and the toothless mouth, sometimes supplemented by a guttural mumble-jumble of a battered mind, have been the badges of boxing. You've all seen them at one time or another, hanging around the fringe of boxing. Crashing the gate or seeking a little handout at the door. Their number continually shrinks, thanks to enlightenment and vigilant commission control. But there is still a welfare job to be done."

If you're worried about picking up a little too much weight, give a thought to Alsab, who gained 150 pounds this winter.

The wonder horse apparently is going to keep it, too. He has been galloping for the past month at Keeneland and shows no signs of again becoming the painful looking bag of bones who thrilled so many fans last season. He has rounded out nicely during his first real rest of his racing career and his trainer Sarge Schwenke has a new note of assurance in his voice these days when he repeats, "Alsab is the greatest horse in the world."

Alsab will go to Churchill Downs toward the end of the spring meeting and then move on to Chicago for the formal opening of his season's assault on Whirlaway's peak winnings.

Iowa's Jim Harris Reports to Army

Iowa City, Iowa, April 7 (AP).—Jim Harris, acting head football coach at the University of Iowa said he has been ordered to report in Des Moines Thursday for his final Army physical examination.

Recently reclassified A-1, Harris said he already has been rejected by the Army once. He has defective eyesight, he said.

Meanwhile, Frank Carideo, backfield coach of the last four years, has received a commission in the Navy and will be sworn in at the recruiting office at Des Moines Monday. He will be a lieutenant (junior grade) as an aviation volunteer specialist. Carideo was quarterback on Knute Rockne's Notre Dame teams of 1928, 1929 and 1930.

Jack, Montgomery Title Bout Set May 21

Jacobs Finally Closes Out Scrap After Several Weeks Dickering

By the Associated Press

New York, April 7.—Beau (the Jumping) Jack will make the first defense of his half of the world lightweight championship against Philadelphia Bob Montgomery in Madison Square Garden May 21, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today.

The fight, over the 15-round derby route, has been "on the fire" for several weeks, but was not signed until today—48 hours after Montgomery flattened Roman Alvarez in Philadelphia in four rounds.

Jack's half of the 135-pound crown is that "blessed" by the New York State Athletic Commission as a result of Sammy Angott's off-again-on-again retirement last fall. When Sammy announced he was through for keeps because of bad hands, New York's sage fistic fathers had Jack fight Allie Stolz. After he whipped the curly-haired Newarker they sanctioned a bout between the Bouncing Beau and Tippy Larin as a "title" tussle. The Beau knocked Larkin out.

Meantime the National Boxing Association, holding to the theory that championships "are won and lost in the ring"—which is a firm beak-busting policy of long standing—has kept the title open, regarding Jack only as the "leading contender" until such time as he has eliminated all other logical contenders. Montgomery is one of the top-flight "logicals." Angott returned to the ring recently and also is high up on the N. B. A.'s list of the fighters Jack has to prove he can beat before he'll get clear title to the title.

"Mr. Long-Pants," making his first start of the exhibition season, delighted a crowd of 3500 with one-hit pitching during the three inning he was on the mount. He fanned six, retiring the Coast Guard boys on strikes in the second inning. Rookie Ken Trinkle, with Baltimore last year, finished the game and was touched for four safe blows.

by the Comptroller General that the bill would legalize the levying of the 10 per cent "gate tax" and provided for superfluous funds to be turned over to the Treasury Department to be credited to a "Miscellaneous Trust Fund, District of Columbia Boxing Commission" and would be disbursed through usual District channels. The trust fund to be retained by the commission is expected to be set at $15,000. At present, slightly over $21,000 is in the commission treasury.

Little objection is expected to its passage.

Representative Oren Harris, chairman of the subcommittee, announced another hearing would be scheduled in the near future before the bill is reported out to the full committee.

Little was done other than clarify minor details.

The proposed legislation was drafted by Representative Fred Hartley of New Jersey, "Father of Boxing in the District," after the Comptroller General ruled that the 10 per cent Boxing Commission tax was illegal under the existing law. The three boxing commissioners, Chairman Claude W. Owen, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., and Police Lieut. John J. Agnew and District Commissioner John Russell Young and Col. Charles W. Kutz, engineer commissioner, and D. C. Elder, representing the General Accounting Office, testified.

Using its 22-hit attack to the fullest advantage, Gonzaga yesterday opened its 1943 baseball season with a surprising 16-5 win over the Central tossers.

Gilbert Lansdale hurled the distance for the Eagles, scattering six hits nicely and fanning six. His mates supported him very well with every man on the team getting at least one hit.

The Southern Conference is not recognizing golf as a conference sport this season but the Colonials are arranging matches with Georgetown, Catholic U., Navy, Western Maryland, Virginia and Johns Hopkins. The Colonials hope to play a six-man team but may be forced to schedule four-man matches.

Catholic U. will not sponsor a golf team, but Eddie Lafond, director of athletics, has given a group of golf-minded students permission to arrange their own schedule and play local matches. Bob Heltzel, of the boxing team, and Joe Zailkas will lead the Cardinal linksmen.

Maryland gave up golf last year as a competitive sport.

Robinson May Upset 'Kid' Cocoa

Alexander Meets Joey Archibald In Eight Rounder Tomorrow Night

Louis (Kid) Cocoa, third-ranking welterweight of the boxing game, may be in for a surprise tomorrow night when he squares away with dangerous Young Kid Robinson, Des Moines (Iowa) warrior, fighting out of Philadelphia, in one of three events of eight rounds each on the Liberty Athletic Club's show at Uline Arena.

In remaining eights, Joey Archibald, twice former world's featherweight champion, meets Carroll (Kid) Alexander, 22-year-old local boy, while Herbert Marshall, fast-rising Brooklyn bomber, will box either Johnny Kapovich or Willie Thomas, both good heavyweights.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn last night announced that he was making overtures for either Kapovich or Thomas to replace Napoleon Mitchell as an opponent for Marshall. Mitchell, it appears, signed a contract to box Marshall here last April 1, but two days later signed articles for a Newark bout with Clent Conway April 12.

Cocoa, a combination of boxer and puncher, won over Phil Furr and Andre Jessurun, knocked out Joey Sutka and lost a split decision to heavier Georgie Abrams in previous starts here.

The amazing Puerto-Rican-born Negro has had well over 200 professional bouts and has been boxing lightweights, welterweights and middleweight since 1930. Numbered among his amazing feats are no fewer than seven victories over the high-ranking Holman Williams. Chalky Wright, Eddie Booker, Jimmy Leto, Tony Martin, Vinnie Vines, Bobby Britton, Tony Cisco, Slugger White, Kid Azteca, Young Peter Jackson, Norman Rubio, Steve Mamakos, Paulie Walker, Wickey Harkins, Sonny Jones, Jerry Fiorello and Eddie Dolan all have dropped decisions to the Cocoa Kid, who has knocked out Billy White twice), Young Peter Jackson, Johnny Barbara, Frankie Britt, Andre Jessurun, Manuel Villa, Young Hurtado, Jackie Portney and Bobby Laurence.

Archibald, Cocoa and Marshall all are expected to complete training in New York last today and will report here tonight.

Lewis, Starr, Galiano on Turner Card

A parade of local and out-of-town stars was lined up yesterday for next Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena, headlined by an eight-rounder between Danny Petro, the "Walloping Wop," and Lew Transparenti of Baltimore, twice conqueror of Joey Archibald, and a lad who fought eight champions.

Promoter Turner announced he had secured Stoney Lewis, Washington Negro middleweight, for an eight-rounder; Pete Galiano, Baltimore's fast-moving welterweight, for another eight-rounder, and Charlie Petro, Danny's brother, for another eight.

Turner already has secured Joey Starr, a youngster who is regarded in Eastern rings as a crowd-pleaser, to face Galiano. Opponents for both Lewis and Petro will be secured today.

Lewis has recently scored a unanimous decision over Al Gilbert of Newark at the arena, while Charlie Petro last week reached new heights when he flattened Eddie Davis of Chester, Pa., in the first round.

Transparenti is a hustling fighter, always in good shape, and has the blessings of such fight men as Max Waxman and Heinie Blaustein. Besides beating Archibald twice, he whipped Lew Salica, and lost a close one to Harry Jeffra, former champs.

Schwartz Team Handball Winner

Jack Schwartz and Pearlman won the A. A. U. handball doubles title, defeating Maj. Dave Boland and George Newman, 14-21, 21-15 and 21-7 last night at the Y. M. C. A. In the consolation match, John Payne and Al Houlon downed H. Tenny and Joe Sonntag, 15-21, 21-13, 21-10.

Lewis Meets Macricostas Here Tonight

Ed (Strangler) Lewis, five-time former world's champion, will run into an obstacle tonight at Turner's Arena identified at George Macricostas, a handsome Greek who won Olympic honors and now is turning his attention to a campaign to succeed Jimmy Londos.

Lewis, despite the fact he keeps on rolling like Tennyson's proverbial brook, is a seasoned veteran many years the senior of Macricostas. He is mat-wise and has worked himself into tip-top shape, hoping to win the title for the sixth time.

Promoter Turner meanwhile announced that he was planning a big one-night tournament, and that winner of the Lewis-Macricostas bout would be given one of the top seeded positions in this round-robin competition—and that other participants tonight would be offered a chance in this event which may come off next Thursday.

Lewis is willing to meet Jimmy Londos again. They've met 11 times in the last two decades and the Strangler won every bout. That old rivalry may be revived, or it may be that Macricostas, should he win, will get the shot at Londos. If not Londos, the original French Angel, Maurice Tillet.

The two-man team bout tonight finds Johnny Long and Ace Freeman dueling with Bamba Tabu, Indian, and Eddie Pope of Philadelphia.

Riders Rout Little Hoyas, 22-7, in Debut

Roosevelt High School's baseball team got off to a flying start yesterday by walloping Georgetown Prep 22-7.

The Riders jumped on John Dillin and Jim Healey Little, Hoya pitchers, in the first inning for 12 runs. They came back to tally a pair of markers in the second, three in the third, and five in the fourth. The Prepmen had to be satisfied with three runs in the first, two in the third, and another brace in the fifth.

Leigh Joy and Jack Grazos held Georgetown to four hits while their mates were gathering an even dozen. Sid Drazin hit for the circuit twice and Charley Howard once. A fifth semester lad, Joe Jackson, was impressive with three hits in four tries.

Film of Infinite Appeal Opens at Loew's Palace

IT HAS THE IMPACT of a lifetime of precious experiences compressed into two brief hours of absorbing running time.

That is about as close as this typewriter can come to summarizing the over-all effect of "The Human Comedy," which this morning inaugurates what should be a richly rewarding engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater—as richly rewarding to the spectator as to the statistical gentlemen who tabulate the box-office statements.

A little idealistic, to be sure, but by no means another excursion into the field of symbolism and purely imaginative writing, this painstaking and profoundly moving Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of William Saroyan's minute examination of middle-class American life is a dozen different stories welded into one through the vital concerns of a family of five and its reactions to a war that seems remote and yet reaches into the very heart of their home.

It is a composite of humor, emotion, sensitiveness and supreme drama, overlaid with a philosophy of living that is none the less impressive because it is more altruistic in spirit than it is actual in common practice.

Embodied in the warmly human design of the mosaic are the bewilderment and inquisitiveness of childhood and early youth, the groping of adolescence for the eternal verities, love's oblivion to caste and class distinctions, the gentleness and understanding that come with the years, the sturdy foundations of character in our civilian soldiery and, in a hundred manifestations, the capacity of the human heart for compassion, helpfulness, tolerance and a common brotherhood.

If this sounds too dogmatic and academic for popular consumption, it is not, as revealed upon the screen in an admirably fashioned script, skillfully integrated by Howard Estabrook and sympathetically directed by Clarence Brown.

To attempt an individual appraisal of all these integral parts and overlapping facets of "The Human Comedy" would be an endless and a fruitless task. It is not so much that the basis of a complete drama is to be found in the childhood curiosity of little Ulysses Macauley, or in the perplexities of his older brother, Homer, who gains his first contact with the world at large as a messenger boy, after school hours; or in the consciousness of Marcus, the oldest Macauley boy, of what it is he and his fellow soldiers are fighting for; or in the romances that run through the pattern of the play, as it is that, so adroitly interwoven, they make up a dramatic fabric of such strong and agreeable texture. The incidents involving the characters in the play are the simple, commonplace experiences of all of us, given life and power and perspective. This is the field in which Saroyan is at his best, because he is writing of the things he loves most—the "little people" and their immensely important concerns. Only occasionally, and then only momentarily, does he stray from the straight line of complete conviction to idealize a shade too poetically.

A Cast of Stellar Caliber

The foremost characters in the play—and there is not an inconsequential one in it—are portrayed with a naturalness and freedom from artificiality in complete harmony with the spirit of the picture. Mickey Rooney, in the role of Homer, suddenly become the "man of the family," resorts to no "mugging" or overplaying in this assignment and turns in a performance that might well restore him to his three-year place as the cinema's top box-office attraction. Little 5-year-old Jack Jenkins artlessly contrives to "steal" every scene he is in, and Van Johnson gives a characteristically fine account of himself as Marcus, the son who symbolizes a war that never otherwise obtrudes itself upon the screen. Fay Bainter, as the mother, and Frank Morgan, Willie Grogan, the superannuated telegraph operator, are perfect in their roles, and Donna Reed, Dorothy Morris and Ann Ayars are among others who give "The Human Comedy" as uncommon appeal. To Marsha Hunt and James Craig is judiciously intrusted the romantic movement of the drama, and John Craven leaves an indelible impression by the skill of his work as Toby George, the orphanage lad, to whom the fullness of life comes out of the depth of its anguish.

Despite the two-hour length of the feature, the short subjects at the Palace this new week have not been entirely neglected. Of foremost interest will be Pete Smith's introduction of "Falla," the President's Scottie, to the theatergoing public. The Defense Reel is devoted to "City of Courage" and the picturized "News of the Day" rounds out a program that could stand indefinitely on the superior excellence of the major feature alone.

Show Gals Are Running to Altitude These Days

A TALL GIRLS PARADE

After a countrywide search, Producer Hunt Stromberg succeeded in getting together this septet of lofty lookers for his forthcoming United Artists release of the film version of Gypsy Rose Lee's "The G-String Murders," starring Barbara Stanwyck under the new title of "Lady of Burlesque." The six-foot show girls, in the usual direction, are Janis Carter, Barbara Slater, Dallas Worth, Elinor Troy, Carol Carelton, Virginia Gardner and Mary Gail

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

'Shake Hands, Come Out Fighting!'

Hollywood, April 7 (INS).—It looks as if there is going to be a battle royal for the film rights to Henry Bellamann's unpublished novel, "Victoria Grandolet." Jack Warner told me a few weeks ago he had bought the rights to the book for Bette Davis. Then today Buddy de Sylva came forth with the story he had bought the same book and that he was confident David O. Selznick would lend him Joan Fontaine, since he already has her for "Frenchman's Creek."

JANE WITHERS

Well, you know that both Warners and Paramount can't make the picture, so I telephoned Jack Warner to say, "How come?" "We'll fight for our rights," said Jack. "Ann Watkins, Bellamann's agent, sent the manuscript and wanted us to have the first refusal because the author liked the way we handled his 'Kings Row.' The price was $40,000 and we said we would accept it. I can't help it if the price has been upped. I acted in good faith."

Chatter in Hollywood: Puppy love is always pretty important to the youngsters involved, and Jane Withers, who will be 17 next Saturday, and Harley Grainber, who reaches the ripe old age of 18 July 1, are no exception. Jane and Harley met when he signed at the Sam Goldwyn Studios for the male lead in "The North Star," in which Janie played a featured role. Harley answered an advertisement asking for a young actor, and, according to Sam, he was a grocery clerk until he became moviewise. His part is the lead opposite Ann Baxter and he is tall, don't know how dark, but plenty handsome. He was Jane's dancing partner at the Palladium last Saturday and will be her escort to her birthday party.

The cavalcade of Jerome Kern songs, to be made into a musical bouquet by Arthur Freed and rumored for so long, is soon to be a reality. The deal, Freed admitted, is all but closed. Under the title of "Silver Lining," all the 104 musical hits of Kern will figure. The history of the songs, something like "Alexander's Ragtime Band," i. the idea. Guy Bolton is now working on the story,

HEDDA HOPPER

Husband on Furlough; Wife on Draft!

Hollywood, Calif., April 7.—Both Tyrone Power and Will Price are here on furlough. They'll soon push off to Quantico, Va., for basic training . . . Annabella is wanted by the Theater Guild to play "L'Aiglon" but she may remain here to continue in pictures . . . Gregory Ratoff moved to another set for "Russia." The place was filled with cattle, horses, pigs, and chickens. He got a look at a porker and said, "Why do we have to have pigs?" . . . Eddie Duchin says he won't touch a piano for the duration. He joined up to fight, and that's what he's doing . . . George Cukor wouldn't give up until his temperature reached 104. Then he was carted off to the hospital. It's flu.

ANNABELLA

You Name It!

Abbott and Costello's last picture, during its making, was called "O, Doctor!" When finished, it became "Pardon My Ski." Now it's "Hit the Ice." When it hits the theaters it's anybody's guess as to what it will me called . . . Bob Paige has been at Universal 19 months. He's started his nineteenth picture, "Get Going," with Gracie McDonald . . . Bing Crosby, rolling along in a little red Ford with radio tuned in to a program playing Crosby records and Bing singing along with the records . . . Edgar Bergen drives a toy car he bought for Charlie. But when Edgar's in it there's no room for Charlie.

Roll 'Em to Music

Roy Del Ruth and Jack Cummings are whipping up another "Broadway Melody" and they're going to have a musical dice game, with girls shooting in rhythm. They'll need Rochester to coach them at that . . . Forty of the 65 boys trained for Sonja Heinie's ice skating picture have gone to war. Jerry Steffen, who's 19 and making his debut with Sonja in "Winter Time," expects to join them. Monty Woolley is no hero at his own studio. He tried to drive on the lot, but gateman stopped him, held him up 15 minutes. He wouldn't believe that beard was a star! . . . Pasadena playhouse taking bows on Louise Albritton. She got her training there.

Pound Wise

Deanna Durbin's sorry she rented her car in "Hers to Hold." She was off at noon, but waited until 8 p. m. until they'd finished with her car. . . . Andy Devine's in the market for a couple of horses—riding, not eating. . . . Jack Douglas' gag book, "Laugh, Damn You," in its third edition. . . . Orson Welles finishing two shorts on South America. . . . Leonid Antonav bought Lester Cowan's "Commandos Strike at Dawn" for Russia, but mostly he took back with him newsreels and the March of Time. . . . The thing that saved Van Johnson's life, I'm told, is that he'd given six pints of blood to the Red Cross. During his accident he lost three quarts, but his system already had become inured to it.

Some Saga

"Beer Barrel Polka," written in Czecho-Slovakia, became popular in Germany. Later Britain adopted it, as you know if you saw "In Which We Serve." Now the Andrews Sisters, who started it off here, have dressed it up with new lyrics, call it "Here Comes the Navy," and the Navy's adopted it as a war song. . . . Producer Bobby North bought "Wide Open House" for Republic. It was written by Len Newbaur, who's in the Paramount trailer department. He's trying to get Jane Withers for it. You should hear the rave Sam Goldwyn and Lewis Milestone are doing about Janie and her work in "The North Star." Believe me, when those two put on a song and dance, it means the little child star has grown up.

Short Shorts

Rex Ingram, who may still be remembered by old timers for "The Four Horsemen," is seen much around the Nation's Capital. So is Priscilla Dean, now Mrs. Les Arnold. He is one of those round-the-world Navy flyers . . . Gertrude Niesen got a present of silverware from Henry Kaiser for her job recruiting workers for his Richmond shipyards . . . Jinx Falkenburg and her family—mother and brothers—move on to Dallas, Tex., and a tennis match for the Red Cross . . . Bill Perlberg won't have to wait till the end of the run before putting "The Eve of St. Mark" on the screen. Play's designed for morale purposes now—not a year or two years hence. You know "Arsenic and Old Lace" has been finished more than a year—yet Warners can't release it till stage play finishes its run

Broadway's Pulse Beat

New York, April 7.

The New York City Council will conduct an inquiry concerning the mayoralty and the Ostertag bill. The first two witnesses they'll call will be the two best known stars of other metropolitan inquiries—Sam Seabury and Tom Dewey . . . Harold Ostertag, the Republican who introduced the legislation, now insists that he didn't know LaGuardia would benefit by it—that he drew the bill for some up-State officials . . . Maj. Ben Namm, the department-store man, will head the purchasing commission to Brazil. Bernard Baruch's brother is a member of that commission . . . Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota is writing a book about America's foreign policy.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN

Justice Sam Rosenman will go to Johns Hopkins in Baltimore this week for a check-up on his eyes, which have been troubling him . . . Matty Fox of Universal Films, one of the ablest of the young men in the WPB, may leave that post soon. Fox probably will join the War Department . . . Francis Flood, now with the British Supply Mission, will become Food Administrator Chester Davis' assistant . . . An attempt will be made to revoke the ban against racing at Saratoga this summer—which would mean two tracks operating in the State at the same time. The Saratoga officials insist that, like the Kentucky Derby operators, they can draw the streetcar crowds.

Governor Dewey will call a special session of the New York State Legislature for May 20, regarding New York City's finances . . . The brother of Brig. Gen. William J. Donovan now is a member of Otto of Hapsburg's court . . . Herman Mankiewicz, who wrote the screen play of "Citizen Kane," is planning a libel suit against William Randolph Hearst and the Hearst papers, because of the treatment and the big space they devoted to the story of his auto crash . . . Two Broadway actors have been mugged within the past few days—Tom Rutherford, of "Richard III," and Francis Compton, of "The Patriots" . . . Townsend and John L. Lewis may merge their third-party plans.

Republican leaders here will wager that Judge Bleakeley, now conducting investigations for Dewey, will be the candidate for United States Senator . . . Owen D. Young hasn't retired from politics yet. He, too, has his eye on a senatorial nomination . . . General Donovan's Office of Strategic Services may be split up again—with those not going into uniform to be absorbed by the OWI . . . Sam Goldwyn fired an employe by phoning him and saying: "I want to see you at once. Bring your hat and coat" . . . When Anthony Eden returned to London, his baggage included some delicacies—personal food-gifts from the Roosevelts to the Churchills.

Harry Miller, husband of the late Alice Duer Miller, has written a biography of his wife, the author of "The White Cliffs of Dover" . . . The success of "Oklahoma," the musical hit which was adapted from Lynn Riggs' "Green Grow the Lilacs," was a windfall for Riggs—who now is a sergeant in the Army . . . Last week the Court of Appeals made a unique ruling, which permits any man who has pleaded guilty to move to set aside his plea if he can prove it was induced by fraud or promises which weren't kept. The first applicant will be Skoblow, "The Torch," who helped break the arson ring in Brooklyn and New York, but who received a 20-to-40-year sentence.

Sergt. Julie Oshins, the comic star of "This Is the Army," was a vaudeville partner of Ben Lessy, who has been playing soldier roles in the films. Lessy now will rejoin Oshins. He's being drafted . . . The lady who was Mrs. Paul Henreid's nurse in Vienna and who has lived with their family ever since Mrs. Henreid was a baby, finally arrived in America last month and again is living with the Henreids. She speaks no English and has difficulty giving orders to the tradesfolk. That's why the Alabama maid in the household of the screen star told Henreid: "She's too old to study English. So I'm learning German."

An OWI employe suggested to Elmer Davis that the morale of his organization might be improved if he'd arrange a get-together and dance for the entire department. "Anyone who thinks that the morale of any person would be improved by dancing with me," said Davis, "is crazy" . . . Sir Cedric Hardwicke now is a prospect for the leading role in Saroyan's "Get Away, Old Man" . . . Joe Pannich, the lawyer formerly with the SEC and now with the Board of Economic Warfare, will be named as assistant to Robert Patterson, the Undersecretary of War . . . John J. Bennett, the former Attorney General and Democratic candidate for Governor, may bid for the district attorney's job in Brooklyn.

Mr. Saroyan's Unusual Love Interest

MARSHA HUNT AND JAMES CRAIG,
as the incongruous young lovers, who demonstrate that a seeming mesalliance need not necessarily be one, in "The Human Comedy." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of William Saroyan's appealingly human story, now on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Other roles of prime importance are played by Mickey Rooney, Frank Morgan, Fay Bainter, Master Jack Jenkins, Van Johnson and many more besides

Little Revives a Gay Musical

In "The Ziegfeld Girl," the Little Theater has hit upon a nice subject for revival this week. Even without its cleverly contrived "escapist" story, this glittering reversion to the glorified type of musical thing with which Ziegfeld's name is inseparably linked would be justified by the all-star character of its cast alone.

With James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner and Judy Garland in the top assignments, surrounded by such as Tony Martin, Jackie Cooper, Ian Hunter, Charles Winninger, Edward Everett Horton and Philip Dorn, any picture would need little else. "The Ziegfeld Girl," however, has a great deal else to commend it.

For example, there is plenty of contrast and no little conflict in the movement of the story of a vaudeville performer, a Brooklyn elevator operator and the sweetheart of an obscure composer, who find their way into the Ziegfeld forces and all manner of romantic and melodramatic complications. The progression of events has been so manipulated that frequent introduction of spectacular musical numbers does not fall outside the plot and in Robert Z. Leonard's knowing direction the piece has a great asset. Mr. Leonard knows his way around in this sort of thing as well as the skillful players he has under his command.

Since the period of the play permits it, use has been made of the dramatic potentialities of that fabulous "bootleg era" that flourished 'way back when.

The production, needless to say, is in the grand and flamboyant M-G-M manner, touched off with all the pyrotechnics that Ziegfeld would have demanded, had he had a hand in it.

The new bill, as usual, is augmented by appropriate short subjects covering a variety of fields, including the governmental matters uppermost in the public mind.

No Temperament Around These Parts, Sheriff!

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, April 7—Many movie stars suffer from temperament. Certainly. They have their wrangles with directors. Sure they do. They high-hat their fellow players occasionally. Of course.

But there's one movie idol whose feet aren't clay. And whose pay ain't hay—the man who stars in Westerns.

Gene Autrey, Roy Rogers, Bill Boyd, John Wayne—such men are "solid;" never cause a bit of trouble. No, sir. Why?

Well, some may say, cowboys are naturally pretty fine fellows, earnest, hard-working, and all that. Yeah, that's true, but these men didn't get their schooling in manners from early life on the range.

Roy Rogers worked in an Ohio shoe factory, picked peaches, drove a sand and gravel dump truck.

John Wayne, son of an Iowa druggist, was a motion picture "prop" man.

Association Does It

No, it's neither heredity nor early environment that makes so-called cowboy stars big-hearted, kindly men, the best-liked men in Hollywood. It's their present association with some mighty fine gentlemen, the supporting players in hoss operas.

Now, the supporting players and extras in other types of films are not always gentlemen. They're ambitious; often rather selfish; they do a little throat-cutting here and there; they try to hog the camera.

But the men who support the Western stars have only one ambition—to do faithfully and to the best of their ability any job they are asked to do. They seek no publicity, desire none. They are men who grew up on the cattle ranges of the old West, men who have faced the fierce competition of America's biggest rodeos; quiet men, loyal to their friends.

Rode Quite a Herd

There's Harry Willingham, who from 1919 to 1922 was foreman of the Palomas Land & Cattle Co. in Chihuahua and Sonora, Mexico, an outfit that ran 100,000 cattle on 2,500,000 acres. Before that Harry was on a little bit of a job, foreman of the Corralitos Land & Cattle Co., also in the State of Chihuahua, but which merely covered 1,100,000 acres and had only 75,000 cattle.

Comes now Frank McCarroll, former champion bull-dogger of the world. Three times at Madison Square Garden, thrice in Chicago, twice at Fort Worth, once at Pendleton, again at Cheyenne this range veteran defeated the best the West could send against him.

Count in, also, Andy Jauregue, one-time holder of the world's calf and steer roping championships. A ranch owner now, but still a cowboy, Andy likewise owns the famous Brahma bull, "Squarehead," aboard whose bucking back no cowhand yet has been able to "qualify" in a rodeo contest.

A quiet little man on the set of "A Lady Takes a Chance" is Lewis Morphy; quiet and trustworthy. He's the only man most of California's cowboys will permit to shoot a cigarette from their mouths while "Morph" is on the back of a horse!

A President Their Pal

Yes, and there's Buck Bucko, once a top hand with the big Pyramid Stock & Land Co. of Nevada; Carl Arnold, champion steer roper from New Mexico; Harry Lodge, champion bronc rider, from Newhall, Calif.; Dick Farnsworth, who won the bareback riding championship in five of his last seven shows, and was second in the two others.

Association with men such as these teaches simplicity, dignity, courage, a spirit of honest hospitality to the city-raised stars of Western pictures.

A President of the United States went to school beside their camp fires.

Teddy Roosevelt.

Joan Gets Kudos For Drama Work

Hollywood.—Joan Leslie, who won quick recognition as a singer and dancer in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," has emerged as a top dramatic actress in Warner Brothers' "The Hard Way," a survey of reactions in six first-release towns has revealed.

Consensus of critics was that Miss Leslie, who co-stars with Ida Lupino in the dramatic film which features Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson, definitely proved herself a performer far beyond her years. The picture depicts the 18-year-old youngster as a Broadway musical and dramatic star.

Star's Pal Takes Her Medicine, Too

Hollywood.—If it't true that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, then Joan Carroll ought to realize that Patty Pyle considers her the tops.

Joan, RKO-Radio's 11-year-old, featured with Ruth Warrick and Walter Reed in "Petticoat Larceny," came down with the sniffles one day on the set. She was hustled away at once to the studio hospital where the nurse swabbed her throat, put drops in her nose.

Patty Pyle, also 11, Joan's oldest friend and stand-in (by Joan's own insistence), had no sniffles, but insisted on receiving the same medical treatment.

"I'll suffer with you, too, Joan," nobly said Patty Pyle.

Morgan Stock To Be Offered At $200 Share

By the Associated Press

New York, April 7.—A group of investment bankers headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., and Smith, Barney & Co. have arranged to buy from the estate of J. Pierpont Morgan its holdings of 18,750 shares of stock in J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., it was reported today.

Public offering of the stock was expected to be made tomorrow at $200 a share, with a concession to dealers of $3 a share and with the offering subject to allotment.

In Morgan's will, his two sons, Junius S. and Henry S. Morgan who are executors with the cooperation of the estate, were authorized "without limitation" specifically to exercise their powers in respect to this stock. Steep inheritance taxes were mentioned in discussions of the expected offering.

Public distribution of this block of Morgan stock would be the second such occasion in the long history of the institution. On February 3, 1942, Smith, Barney & Co., sold publicly 16,500 shares of the company at $206 a share, the reason being officially stated as to broaden ownership. The shares were purchased from holders and did not represent new stock.

Secondary Offering Of RKO Expected

New York, April 7 (AP).—Financial circles heard today that a banking group headed by Dillon, Read & Co. was expected to make a secondary distribution shortly of large blocks of securities of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp.

About 96,000 shares of the common was acquired from the Rockefeller Foundation, owners of the Radio City Music Hall, and the remainder from the Radio Corp. of America.

Navy Cites 2 Enlisted Men From Washington Region

FOLEY

One of the citations, for Seaman Second Class Hubert Madden Foley, 23, son of Hubert Mark Foley of 3916 Nicholson Street, Hyattsville, Md., was awarded posthumously. Foley lost his life while manning a machine gun during an attack upon a convoy by Nazi planes last September 14.

The Navy Air Medal went to Aviation Radioman Third Class Albert M. McClure, 25, who formerly resided at 2032 Belmont Road Northwest. The son of Thomas Edward McClure of Utica, N. Y., he was cited for his participation in an attack on a Japanese cruiser during the battle of Santa Cruz, October 26.

Foley, popularly called "Duke," was born in Washington and attended St. Gabriel's School and Central High School. He was an employe of Pepco when he enlisted in the Navy, September 2, 1941. A brother, Francis James Foley, is in naval aviation, while another brother, James Simpson Foley, is in the Army Air Forces.

His citation read:

"A report of the occurrence indicates that enemy bombers, torpedo planes and submarines launched prolonged and sustained attacks upon the convoy to which you were attached. Throughout these days when the men were continuously at their battle stations, the armed guard crew valiantly fought off recurrent waves of planes which viciously blasted the convoy with bombs and torpedoes.

"During these attacks, the gunners of your ship, despite the withering fire of low-flying planes, unflinchingly remained at their stations and met the enemy raiders with a merciless hail of fire. Again and again the planes returned to the attack. At each time the armed guard crew sent up a terrific barrage of expert and accurate counterfire.

"Before your ship finally fought her way clear of the relentless and persistent bombardment, seven hostile craft had been sent to their destruction in the sea by her blazing guns.

"Although you did not complete the voyage because of fatal wounds received during the engagement, the ship was brought safely to port through your courageous assistance as a member of the armed guard. Your devotion to duty and self-sacrifice in giving your life in defense of your country was in keeping with the highest traditions of the naval service."

McClure was cited for:

"Meritorious achievement in participating in aerial flight as radioman and turret gunner in a torpedo bomber of the U. S. S. Hornet air group during action against Japanese forces near Santa Cruz Islands, October 26, 1942. Coolly and effectively performing his tasks in the face of extremely heavy enemy antiaircraft fire, McClure, by his skill and gallant devotion to duty, contributed in a large measure to the success of an attack on a Japanese heavy cruiser. His courageous conduct throughout the engagement reflects great credit upon the United States naval service."

Lutheran Cleric Asks Backing For 'World Action' Program

An appeal for support of the Lutheran World Action movement, especially its servicemen's program, was voiced yesterday by the Rev. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle.

The Rev. Mr. Tabor, chairman of Lutheran World Action for the United Lutheran Church in America, addressed a city-wide Lutheran Laymen's Fellowship luncheon at Schender's Cafe, 427 Eleventh Street Northwest.

Migration of thousands of Lutheran men and women to war industry centers and into the armed forces is one of the "hardest nuts to crack" in the field of Lutheran World Action, said the cleric, in a brief message outling the project's aims.

Toward that end, a number of service centers have been established near camps and naval stations and war plants, he said. Lutheran World Action has an annual budget of one million dollars.

Capt. Fred Konemann of Luther Place Memorial Church was named chairman of a committee to plan continuance of the monthly fellowship luncheons. Marine Staff Sergt. Martin A. McGrory, sr., of Atonement Lutheran Church displayed Japanese war souvenirs which his son, Marine Staff Sergt. Martin A. McGrory, jr., recently brought here while on furlough.

Thomas Hickman, City Bank official and layman of Reformation Lutheran Church, was chairman of yesterday's luncheon.

Ration Discussion Held at Maryland U.

A food rationing demonstration was given yesterday by members of the nutrition committee of the student victory council of the University of Maryland in the home economics building.

The demonstration was designed to show students and housewives how ot purchase foods intelligently under the point rationing system without sacrifice of nutritive values.

Food Stamps Must Be Exchanged in Person

You can't put ration stamps on the doorstep for the milkman who leaves butter.

OPA explained yesterday that ration stamps must be handed over in person.

OPA also explained that servicemen who eat part of their meals at camp and part at home are entitled to ration books if they eat 10 or more meals per week away from Army posts.

Army Studies Veterans' Care After War

Preparations are under way to provide hospitalization for veterans of this war, the Budget Bureau announced yesterday.

Budget Director Harold Smith has asked that Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, chairman of the Federal Board of Hospitalization, for a thorough investigation of the problem, so that errors made during the last war may be avoided.

At the direction of the President, immediate coordination and planning for the expansion of all Federal hospitals to accommodate the injured veterans will become the responsibility of the Federal Board of Hospitalization, the announcement said.

"Under the President's direction," General Hines stated, "our duty will be to assure total utilization of all available facilities and prevent overexpansion, but at the same time to be certain that adequate facilities exist to serve in full the needs of our war veterans."

J. H. Baker to Show Wildlife Movies

John H. Baker, executive director of the National Audubon Society, will show colored motion pictures of wildlife and speak at headquarters of the local Audubon Society in the Children's Museum, 4215 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest at 8 p. m. Tuesday.

Baker is widely known as an author and lecturer on wildlife and has taken a leading part in promoting conservation legislation. He will speak on "Protection of Wildlife" and will show pictures of some of America's rarer and more spectacular birds.

Community Chest Election April 14

Membership on the board of trustees of the Washington Community Chest is to be decided at the annual meeting Wednesday, April 14, at 4:30 p. m., Herbert L. Rich, chairman of the committee which nominates those on the list from which members will be selected, said yesterday.

Total board membership is 224, H. L. Willett, Chest director, said.

The list is required to be published six days prior to election in order that contributors may propose additional names.

Those eligible for election must be contributors to the Community Chest this year through the Community War Fund, Chairman Rich said. Although now a member of the Community War Fund, the Community Chest yet operates as a separate body with the board responsible for matters affecting the Chest or its own member agencies.

The board of trustees is composed of two representatives from each participating agency, plus an equal number representing contributors. In addition 12 names are added representing ex-officio members appointed by virtue of official positions held in the District government, the chairman said.

The following names are submitted by the nominating committee for board membership:

Cassar L. Aiello, St. Vincent's Home and School; Miss Alice Van A. Alexander, Society for the Hard of Hearing; Mrs. C. F. Alexander, Travelers' Aid Society; Miss Mildred A. Alexander, Social Service League of Prince Georges County; Bruce R. Allen, Western Union; Miss Mary Anderson, Women's Bureau, Department of Labor.

James C. Arnold, Young Men's Christian Association; Mrs. Clarence A. Aspinwall, 3340 Kalorama Road Northwest; Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, Southwest Community House; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Paul D. Banning, Government Printing Office; Carter T. Barron, Loew's Eastern Theaters; George P. Barse, chief judge, Municipal Court; W. P. Bartel, Interstate Commerce Commission.

William B. Bennett, Capital Transit Co.; The Hon. Fay L. Bentley, judge, Juvenile Court; Kenneth H. Berkeley, Radio Station WMAL; Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, Civilian Defense Volunteer Office; Frank A. Birgfeld, Department of the Treasury; Katherine C. Blackburn, Office of War Information.

Symphony Fund Drive Is Lagging

The sustaining fund goal of $115,000 for the National Symphony Orchestra still was more than halfway off yesterday, 1½ days after the halfway point in the campaign.

Milton W. King, drive chairman, said he was encouraged by the results of the past 1½ days, however, in which an additional $9443 was realized. The fund now stands at $53,500—46.5 per cent of the goal.

King made his report at the check-up luncheon at the Statler Hotel yesterday.

Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin (Republican), New York, was the principal speaker and said he had formed his national committee to solicit funds for the orchestra because Washington is "the capital of the world and the orchestra deserves the support of the country at large." Funds obtained by Baldwin's committee do not become operative until the local goal is attained and will be used to increase the size of the orchestra and the length of the season.

Other talks were made by Walter Bruce Howe, vice president of the orchestra's board of directors, and by Dr. Dillon Ripley, of the War Department, who stressed the importance of the "15-30" youth concerts in helping make Washington more compatible for war workers.

Guests of honor included Mrs. John J. McCloy, wife of the assistant secretary of war; Mrs. Russell R. Waesche, wife of Vice Admiral Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard; Mrs. Leland Harrison, wife of the United States Minister to Switzerland; Mrs. Alfred Johnson, cochairman of the drive's Navy Committee; Miss Alice J. Clapp, honorary vice president of the National Symphony Orchestra Association; Charles W. Eliot 2d, director of the National Resources Planning Board and a member of the orchestra's board of directors; Clark Diamond, Washington businessman, and Kenneth Holland and Walter Prendergast, both of the office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

U. S. Aid in Keeping World Peace Foreseen by Welles in Pacific Institute Talk

United States participation in a major way in maintaining a world peace, even with armed force, was envisioned for the future yesterday by Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles speaking before an informal luncheon of the Institute of Pacific Relations at the Mayflower Hotel.

Great Britain and the United States were among the participants. The luncheon was held to announce the first public report of the results of the conference of the nations at Mont Tremblant, Quebec, last December. The Canadian meeting was held privately.

"Although our number one objective is winning the war," Welles said, "the dreary years of starvation and misery among the occupied and partially occupied nations must not happen again."

He warned that a gruelling task had to be faced before this objective could be accomplished. A durable peace in both the Atlantic and Pacific, which will assure freedom for every people, will be the objective of the United Nations, he explained.

The institute's informal session was attended by representatives from the majority of United Nations, many of whom flew from China, the British Isles and other fighting zones to be present.

Secretary Welles' brief talk and those of others who spoke will be rebroadcast to China and other countries by short wave, it was stated by Edward C. Carter, secretary general oft he institute.

Declaring that Pacific interests are equally important with those of the Atlantic, Dr. Sao-ke Alfred Sze, former Chinese Ambassador to Great Britain and to the United States, asserted that China will continue to fight, if the equipment is forthcoming.

"There was no misunderstanding," he said, referring tot he institute conference held in Quebec last December, "about Manchurial Representatives of all the nations were in unison as to its ultimate recovery from Japan by China."

Undersecretary Wells reiterated this statement in his talk.

At the time of the Quebec conferences some sources had reported that other members of the conference had rejected China's proposal that Manchuria be returned to it from Japan.

"The spiritual unity of The Netherlands and The Netherlands East Indies is not broken and never will be broken," Dr. A. Loudon, Ambassador to the United States told the session.

"The Queen's words and what she said upon her accession to the throne in 1898—that Holland has a moral vocation in the Indies—will be fulfilled by The Netherlands people."

He asserted that the four freedoms had, prior to Pearl Harbor, been a reality among the Dutch people. "The evolution will be taken up where it was broken off," he said.

Bonds between the Philippine people and the United States are stronger today than ever in history. That was the asserion of J. M. Elizalde, resident commissioner of the Philippine Islands, who added:

"Japanese propaganda — day after day—in the islands is bound to have some effect. When the natiyes are again and again told that 'nothing is going to happen to them until the European situation is mastered, they are bound to become depressed.

"Thus the situation in the Pacific becomes of equal importance to the Atlantic," he concluded.

Sir Ronald Campbell, British Minister to the Untied States, explained that the conference yesterday followed the work of the Institute's session held in Mont Tremblant last December.

Senator Thomas (Utah) and Senator Austin (Vermont) had informed Secretary-General Carter earlier of their inability to attend the luncheon because of impending action on the Bankhead measure.

Present at the luncheon were:

Sir Ronald Campbell, British Minister to the United States; Edward C. Carter, Secretary General of the Institute of Pacific Relations; Gardner Cowles, Office of War Information; G. C. Cox, Charge d'Affaires, New Zealand Legation; Lauchlin Currie, Administrative Assistant to the President; Raden Loekman Djajadiningrat, chairman, Netherlands Indies Council; J. M. A courageous and outspoken book by a great American

ONE WORLD

(Holman)

IN THIS BOOK Wendell Willkie gives a highly personal account of his meetings with Stalin, Chiang Kai-shek, General Montgomery, General Chennault and other United Nations leaders. He tells of his talks with prime ministers and kings, and with teachers, soldiers, librarians, factory workers, and farmers around the world. He reports a great awakening that is going on among the peoples of the world and his deep conviction that the United Nations must learn to work together now, while they fight, if they hope to live together after the war is over.

ONE WORLD is an original book, not a compilation.

Mr. Willkie left Mitchel Field on August 26, 1942, in a Liberator bomber known as "Gulliver." It was converted for transport service and operated by U. S. Army officers. His purpose was to see what he could of the world and the war, its battle fronts, its leaders, and its people.

Forty-nine days and 31,000 miles later he landed at Minneapolis. ONE WORLD gives a personal account of that trip. But, more important, it demonstrates how the trip dramatically reinforced parts of Mr. Willkie's own philosophy.

The publishers believe that ONE WORLD is a great contribution to the cause of true victory. It is certainly one of the most courageous and outspoken books ever written by an outstanding public figure. PRICE: $1.00 in pamphlet form, $2.00 in cloth.

Absentees Penalized By Engineer Corps

War Department's Corps of Engineers now penalizes employes who are guilty of absenteeism. Any employe who is absent without prior authority will be charged a day's annual leave and in addition, as a disciplinary measure, he'll be suspended without pay on the following Sunday. In other words, an unapproved absence will cost the employe a day's annual leave and a day's pay. In an emergency, however, in cases of sickness or unavoidable delays, the employe is given two hours in which to call his office to explain his troubles. The order, which was issued by Lieut. Col. Frederick W. Must, has been challenged by some of the employes but the order is all perfectly legal and it's backed up by decisions of the comptroller general.

Tom Wilson of the WPB "brain trust" will resign to set up an office in Cairo for the Board of Economic Warfare. . . . Employes in the publications division of War's Adjutant General's Office were put on a 12-hour day Tuesday. They're kicking. . . . War Manpower Commission has a consultant whose per diem salary will equal if not exceed that of Czar Paul McNutt. . . . A constructive step toward better understanding between Capitol Hill and the executive departments has been taken by Chairman Fritz Lanham of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee. On the first Tuesday of each month his committee will hear National Housing Administrator Jack Blandford explain the problems of his agency. Committee members will be kept up to date and misunderstandings that grow up over a period of time will be obviated. . . . Jess Irvin is back in Government at the OWI news desk.

Jim Bennett, chief of Federal prisons, has worked out a plan to graduate some of his p soners into the Army. The prisons have their own Selective Service Boards. He's now working on the Navy. . . . Justice Department had a 24 per cent turnover last year, 5993 separations and 14,574 new appointments . . . One point that Congress has overlooked in discussing overtime is the fact that it isn't all paid for at time-and-a-half rates. FBI Boss J. Edgar Hoover told the House committee that his employes here put in nearly a million hours of uncompensated overtime last year and that they'd put in 543,000 of voluntary time this year . . . Hoover told the Appropriations Committee that 28,000 Federal workers have police records and about 20 per cent involve major crimes.

No farmer may now take a Federal job unless he gets clearance from the War Manpower Commission or his local draft board. Civil Service will refuse to clear farmers for Federal employment. . . . Incidentally, several agencies have reported employes have resigned to go back to the farms . . . The District of Columbia Fire Department needs men. Privates start at $1900 plus the $300 bonus. Apply at Civil Service . . . Persons employed in private industries taken over by the Federal Government are eligible for war service appointments under a ruling by the Civil Service Commission. Immigration and Naturalization Service has asked for the deferments of 450 of its border patrolmen.

Entries in The Post's March Better Government contest must be submitted to this office by Saturday, April 10. The winner, who'll be given a $100 war bond by this newspaper, will be announced next week. Meantime, employes should get in their suggestions that'll improve the Federal service. Another $100 war bond will be given for the most constructive suggestion made during April. . . . The House Appropriations Committee has approved the suggestion of Librarian MacLeish that time and a half be paid employes who work Sunday, but the committee suggested that no employe be required to work every Sunday. Sunday work along with the 48-hour week, the committee said, "must of necessity result in decreased efficiency."

Several agencies that have appealed the Budget Bureau personnel reduction orders are reported to have had all or part of the original cuts eliminated. Moreover, it's reported that several department heads have taken their cases direct to the President, where they have had a sympathetic hearing. The Postoffice Department is said to be one of the agencies that successfully resisted a cut. The original Budget Bureau order, it's said, cut Postoffice's staff around 5 per cent, or about 15,000 employes. Appeals were made by the department and for the most part they were sustained and the major part of the cut was wiped out.

Draft classifications of Federal employes will begin to clear up within a week. On Monday, War Manpower Commission is slated to issue an order wiping out the 3-B classification and creating a 3-D classification for hardship cases. Moreover, the President is expected to sign the Lodge bill, which would give legal status to his committee on draft deferments. The bill requires that the names of employes deferred must be sent to Congress. If he signs the bill, the President probably will issue a clarifying statement.

Looks Are Deceiving

Houston, Tex.—The young man asked the draft board staff how soon he might be inducted. He blushed when the clerks stared at the baby in his arms.

"I'm not trying to arouse sympathy," he protested. "My wife is working and I couldn't find anyone to stay with the boy."

Embarrassing!

Firetrap Notices Bewilder D. C. Landlords

lodging house at the above premises, an investigation was made by the fire marshal, who has advised the Commissioners that your premises does not comply with the fire regulations. Accordingly, your application for a license is denied . . .

The notice added a friendly little tip to the effect that operating without a license would get the landlord in rouble with the law.

District officials, however, said that whether they knew it or not most of the 1780—who have 10,000 tenants—were being cited for lack of fire escapes. And anybody, said the officials, ought to know whether his place has a fire escape or not.

Moreover, the official added, the landlords probably were told what was wrong by the fire marshal who made the inspecti . However, several hours of inquiry brought out that the District has no procedure of notifying landlords in just what particulars their premises fail to meet the regualtions. What the officials were talking about was anything the fire marshals may have said chatting with the landlord, or servant, or tenant or whoever let him into the house.

Landlords who received notices had these alternatives:

If the landlord already knew what was wrong, District officials said he ought to have already taken steps to obey the fire regulations. Now he must file a new application for a license, setting forth the changed condition of his premises.

Landlords who were not sure what was wrong were advised to find out. And that's where their troubles began.

The District Commissioners sent out their notices to a list of 1780 premises cited by the fire marshal as having failed to comply with the fire regulations. The list did not say what the failures were.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech said he was confident that the fire marshal would have records from which the landlords could learn what was wrong.

District Building Inspector Robert H. Davis was just as confident that the landlords would not be able to find out from fire marshal or anybody else—unless the fire marshal's report had been followed up by a visit from the building inspectors.

Corporation Counsel Keech said the law was perfectly plain, that the landlords must file their new applications and that, until these are granted and licenses issued, the landlords are technically in violation of the law.

It seemed probable that landlords who acted in good faith would not be troubled with prosecutions for these technical violations.

But Leech pointed out a factor which added to the confusion involving the landlords. He said that although the notices served yesterday mentioned only the fire regulations, it was possible that some of the places were lacking in plumbing, electrical and health provisions. If so, he said, the landlords must correct these things, too, before he would be able to get a license.

As far as those clearly lacking fire escapes or other safety devises were concerned, District officials said they would be well advised to have no more than nine tenants above the first floor level. If enforced, this might lead to the eviction of several thousand people.

The War Production Board gave assurances that fire escapes would be promptly available to comply with the District regulations. William C. MacDonald, chief of the WPB housing division, said that applications for fire escapes ought to be submitted through the Federal Housing Administration.

MacDonald said that if all 1780 of the landlords who are being cited should apply for fire escapes, their applications could be cleared within a week. Moreover, he added, the material would be available.

Some such applications have been disapproved recently, but WPB officials explained that this was because they were not properly applied for.

Some who commented at the District Building blamed laxity in enforcement of the fire regulations upon efforts to deal with the housing shortage.

However, the recent deaths and reports of serious unsanitary conditions provoked the interest of Congress and the enforcement of other regulations is being scrutinized.

The Public Health Subcommittee of the House District Committee has started a number of investigations of unsanitary conditions, and one hearing has been held. The Senate District Committee will open hearings on this subject next Monday.

Commissioner Guy Mason remarked day before yesterday that as far as the fire regulations were concerned, "all we can do is toss these tenants out in the street and let the housing folks worry about them."

This sudden attitude of severity provoked observers on the Hill to remark that it appeared the Commissioners were ruthlessly enforcing the fire regulations with the idea that the resulting confusion might persuade the Congressional Committees to tone down the scathing reports that are in preparation on the subject of unsanitary conditions.

License Denial Is Puzzling To Landlords

Friendly, curious and cooperative were the 570 landlords who were officially notified yesterday that their applications for licenses for rooming houses, apartments and the like were being denied because they did not comply with the fire regulations.

There are about 1200 notices yet to be served.

But the landlords declared they had no idea what to do next about improving their premises, ousting their tenants or getting licenses.

Some Experiences

Here are some of the experiences of Patrolman George M. Brill of the Sixth Precinct:

Nobody was home at the first address he visited. But Mrs. Clara Nicholson answered at the next, 1216 Madison Street Northwest.

"I have a notice for you from the fire inspector," Officer Brill began pleasantly. "This notice is in regard to your license for operating a rooming house. It seems that the inspector decided that your home did not meet the regulations and so your application has been rejected."

Brill then handed the notice to Mrs. Nicholson, who read it closely. Then she said: "I don't understand why the application was rejected. Now, I can't just put the roomers out, but we will do what we can about this, officer. Thank you very much."

Too Many Roomers Now

Wholly undisturbed was F. C. Brinley, 1304 Place Northwest, after Brill gave him the same tidings. "It doesn't matter," he said, "because we don't need the roomers. We have too many now, but we can get them out." Mr. and Mrs. Brinley asked Brill whom they ought to call about the situation and he said he didn't know.

Next Brill called on Mrs. Mamie E. Burgess, 1301 Emerson Street Northwest, who responded:

"I don't understand why my application has been rejected. Are there any others in this neighborhood who also have been turned down?"

Brill assured her that indeed there were.

"Well," she said, "what's to happen to the roomers? I can't just turn them out. Do you know anything about it?"

Brill said, no, he didn't, and Mrs. Burgess said she would try and find out.

The next landlady appeared very pleased with the situation. "I kind of expected it, any way," she explained, "and I'm leaving May 1. I'm going to the rent office tomorrow and see about getting the roomers to leave."

In all, eight of the landlords were not at home.

Yard Contest

Girl, 11, Finds Way to Help War Effort

SHIRLEY ANNE CAUFFMAN

Shirley Anne Cauffman, 11 years old, has been looking for a way to help in the war effort. She saw her chance in the home play yard contest, so yesterday the recreation department received this letter from her:

"I am very glad I got in toch with something that will realy help the war. I have a girlfriend named Mable she said that she would help me out a little. You do have wonderful prixes. I thank You very much.

"Sinsereley, Always ready for a job to help win victory."

SHIRLEY ANNE.

Contest officials are glad to know that Shirley wants to make a play yard back of her house, 420 Seventh Street Southeast. It should help in the drive to give young children places to play so they won't have to cross streets to get to public playgrounds.

It seems, however, that Shirley and many of her young colleagues are sending in entry blanks on their own instead of having their parents do it or at least sign them. It's beginning to pose a problem, recreation officials said yesterday, tracing them down to see which have parental approval. Better talk it over with mother and dad first, they advise the youngsters. Then have one of them sign the entry—and go to it on your home play yard.

Ten prizes will be awarded this year, the fourth year for these contests. Starting with a $50 war bond, they include a complete outdoor gym, $25 war bond, $15 credit on equipment, wading pool and shower, $10 credit on equipment, umbrella play tent and three $5 prizes of credit for equipment.

A framed certificate of merit will be presented to the housing development that enters a play-yard deemed to render the greatest community service, and honorable mention certificates will be given to each child whose play-yard is considered a legitimate entry.

Entry blanks for the contest, which closes June 30, are available at District playgrounds and the District Recreation Department, 3149 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Under the direction of the Child Traffic Safety Council, the contest is sponsored by the Junior Board of Commerce, Traffic Advisory Council, Council of Social Agencies, Department of Vehicles and Traffic, Public and Parochial schools and the Recreation Department. Last year it attracted 284 entries.

Work-Week Increase Bill Gains Support

By Mary Spargo

Post Staff Writer

A subcommittee of the Senate District Committee is expected to report favorably within two or three days on a bill to raise the working hours of women in the District from 48 to 54 hours a week and permit a seven-day week.

The bill was strenuously opposed by representatives of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance, who asked for an amendment prohibiting both the seven-day week and a work day longer than nine hours.

Charles E. Sands, agent of the alliance, told Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota, acting as a subcommittee of one, that the 2000 women members of his union were not interested in the time and a half overtime provision of the bill, but in the threat of a seven-day week, since most of them were married women who carried home responsibilities as well as jobs.

Sees Discrepancy

Bushfield remarked in this connection that everyone's work week was guarded except that of soldiers and farmers who always had a seven-day work week.

William Blake, executive director and secretary of the local joint executive council of the union pointed out that women in the hotel and restaurant business were taking over men's jobs, acting as housemen, porters, elevator operators and the like, and said in his opinion women did not have the strength to work seven days at this kind of labor.

Arthur Harnett, secretary of the Hotel Association of Washington, said it had been possible so far to find enough women for hotel jobs and that in his opinion the bill was not necessary at this time.

Traction Man Favors Bills

Appearing in favor of the bill was B. R. Tolson, manager of the Washington Terminal Co. with headquarters at Union Station.

Tolson said he did not advocate overtime as it was "neither efficient nor economical," but said he wanted the minimum hours law lifted, with the safeguards at present in the bill, so that his company, which is employing a greatly increasing number of women would not be in violation of the law if an emergency required women to work a half an hour or so overtime.

M. C. Strahorn, representing the employes of the Washington Terminal Co., also appeared in favor of the bill, and said the women employes were most anxious to see it passed.

Edgar G. Brown of the National Negro Council and Charles M. Thomas of the National Employes and Tenants Union both appeared to demand an amendment specifying that employers must seek to hire Negroes before extending women's work weeks.

Milk, Poultry Prices May Go Up Today

Wholesalers Wait Mandate to Pass Increase Along To Consumers

By Linton Burkett

Post Staff Writer

Dairymen and poultry wholesalers are awaiting OPA orders which will boost the prices of the two most important of the unrationed foods, milk and chickens, in Washington. The orders are expected either today or tomorrow.

The milk order will take the form of a readjustment of retail prices in the city to pass along to the consumer all or part of the 1-cent a quart boost granted to producers by the Department of Agriculture.

The poultry order is expected to be one that will permit processors of chickens to charge an extra 2 cents a pound for processed birds.

Dairymen said it would be at least a day or more before they could pass along the increase in retail price to the consumer after they receive the OPA mandate.

In the interim they must absorb the 1-cent-a-quart increase, which went into effect today on orders of the Department of Agriculture.

Therefore, they are faced with a dead, out-of-the-pocket loss amounting to $3850 a day for each day they have to absorb the increased cost.

Dairymen pointed out that there are an average of 440,000 quarts of milk consumed in Washington a day. They make an average net profit of one-eighth of a cent per quart.

The result is that each day the OPA delays readjusting the local retail price of milk costs them a dead loss of seven-eighths of a cent for each quart of milk they deliver.

Joseph Danzansky, attorney representing the poultry section of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said yesterday he had been assured that action by the OPA would be taken at least by tomorrow on the organization's request for an increase in price on processed chickens of 2 cents a pound.

He said the request was filed with the OPA on March 1 and the Government agency is allowed 30 days in which to make its decision. On April 1 the OPA requested an etxension of time, which the organization granted.

"When the original order was passed allowing processors to tack on a cost of 4 cents a pound for dressing the birds, the OPA admitted the figure was not high enough to pay the actual costs," Danzansky said.

They countered with the suggestion that the lower cost allowance was expected to force the processer to give the farmer a lower price and thus tend to hold down inflation.

"This decidedly has not happened. The farmer is selling his birds for more and more and processors here have simply been unable to acquire any and re-sell them under their ceiling price and not take a loss.

"We asked the OPA to allow us to charge 6 instead of 4 cents a pound for dressing the birds.

"While I am unable to give a definite answer to our request I have reason to believe that we will either get the 2-cent increase or something approximating it."

Danzansky said that while the move to get permission to tack on the higher processing cost originated with Washington poultrymen the effect, if granted, would be Nation-wide.

He said dealers here felt the result would be that more birds would then be shipped to the cities and it will operate largely to relieve the acute shortage in Washington. It also will act as a check on the widespread black market movement of birds from farms in this area to the New York and Philadelphia markets.

The local supply of that other staple of unrationed food, fish, continues to be adequate, the District fish market reported. However, there are seldom any stocks to be carried over from one day to the next.

There has been an increase in price of about 15 per cent in fish and the demand here has increased 25 per cent. The District consumed about 20 million pounds last year, which would mean a consumption of at least 25 million this year.

A local representative of the fish markets here said yesterday he had been informed of the captain of one herring fishing boat earning $2000 last week.

Rock, shad and herring are plentiful in Chespeake Bay waters and the seafood is even being shipped out of Washington to New York and Florida for the first time in the memory of any of the men in the market. The New York market is taking mostly rockfish.

Meanwhile the new ceiling prices set by OPA for the more popular cuts of meat in District stores were shown to result in another bite on the public bankroll.

The result of the order will be that in some of the chain stores prices will advance as much as 48 per cent for some cuts.

9 Firemen Hurt as Fire Causes $75,000 Damage to 2 Stores

Horrors! Lady (arrow) falls in flames! But she's just a wax window model who melted in the fire yesterday at 731 Seventh Street Northwest

Nine firemen were injured and damage estimated at $75,000 was caused yesterday when a two-alarm fire swept through two Seventh-Street clothing stores, and "smoked out" an adjoining beauty supply house.

Believed the have been started by a faulty furnace in the basement of Long's Credit Clothing Store, 731 Seventh Street Northwest, the blaze gained headway quickly and ate through a south wall into the basement and first floor of the Moskin Clothing Store, 729 Seventh. The American Barber & Beauty Supply Co. at 733 was damaged by smoke.

Four firefighters were admitted to Emergency Hospital for smoke exhaustion while five others received first aid for cuts and bruises.

Admitted were Privates J. F. Huppman, No. 16 Engine Company; J. S. Patonal, No. 14 Engine; H. H. Lange, No. 13 Engine, and J. C. Varak of the Training School.

Given emergency treatment and released were Capt. Adam F. Diegelmann, No. 1 Truck; Sergt. H. R. Moret and Privates C. W. O'Malley and J. S. Moren, No. 2 Engine, and Sergt. J. H. Reed of No. 1 Rescue Squad.

The first alarm was pulled at 1:16 p. m. followed in 2 minutes by the second. Spectators jammed the sidewalks as heavy clouds of smoke drifted over the shopping area. Trolley and automobile traffic was suspended on Seventh Street for more than two hours. Streetcars were detoured along Pennsylvania and New York Avenues.

Flames were first discovered by A. P. Monte, manager of Longs. He said he went to the basement of the single-story building after smelling smoke. The fire was licking along a wall near the furnace, he said. He summoned firemen when his efforts to put out the fire failed.

Virtually the entire stock of assorted wearing apparel, including shoes, was destroyed at the Long establishment, a loss estimated at $5,000 excluding the building. P. F. Keefe, manager of Moskins, said his stock was worth about $20,000 but he was unable to determine the extent of damage. Both buildings suffered material loss.

Nineteen pieces of apparatus responded to the two alarms. The fire rescue squad, Chief Engineer Stephen Porter and Marshal Calvin Lauber also responded.

Victory Sidelights

Pontoon Bridge Over Potomac Open to Public This Morning

The pontoon bridge connecting Wisconsin Avenue with the George Washington Memorial Parkway in Virginia will be opened to the public this morning, the United States District Engineer announced last night.

The bridge, third of a series of pontoon bridges to be constructed by the Army within the past two months, will be open to passenger traffic only. The other structures, one at the foot of Constitution Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street and another midway between the Highway and Memorial Bridges, are for emergency purposes only and are not open for public travel.

The United States Engineer Corps said the construction of the three bridges, including building the pontoons, placing them and putting the roadways over them, had been done in record time, as a "double-quick emergency job." Camera enthusiasts were warned that these bridges are military structures, and that even though civilians are allowed to cross them they are not now allowed to take pictures of them.

Pan American Fete

Pan American night will be observed by the Capital Transit Post of the American Legion at Central High School tomorrow at 8:30 p. m., with military attaches from all of the United Nations attending as guests.

Speakers will include representatives from the State Department and the Philippine government-in-exile.

The massed flags of all of the United Nations will be paraded and the Navy School of Music Band will furnish entertainment. The public is invited to attend.

Blood Volunteers

The entire staff of the Lee Sheraton Hotel yesterday volunteered to give one pint of blood each for the American Red Cross plasma bank. Carl H. Claudy of the American Red Cross and Pvt. Roland Sanner, jr., awarded the Purple Heart for distinguished service, addressed the 140 employes, who gave a 100 per cent pledge.

Because of an increased quota of 3000 pints of blood per week, 1000 over the previous weekly goal, the District Red Cross Blood Donor Center at Twenty-third and C Streets Northwest recently extended its hours nightly until 8 o'clock and yesterday issued an appeal for contributors between 6 and 8 p. m.

The center currently is booked up days in advance from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., Red Cross headquarters said, but its staff is anxious to fill the early evening lull. Beginning April 17, its quarters will be open until 3 p. m. each Saturday. Appointments may be made by calling REpublic 8300, Extension 212.

Meaningful Peace Urged By Daniels

President's Aide Warns Against Postwar Terror In Address Here

Jonathan Daniels, famous writer and lecturer, and newly appointed aide to President Roosevelt, urged last night that the United States strive for a meaningful union of all nations after the war.

Warning that "this is the second chance, perhaps the last chance," Daniels declared that "this is the time when a man can be what an American means, can fight for what America has always meant—an audacious, adventurous seeking for a decent earth."

Daniels spoke at a film festival program dedicated to the United Nations, held in the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest.

A Peace of Fear

The peace which follows this war, he pointed out, may be a peace of fear, "a spectacle full of terror." Only if the peace "grows out of man's hope as this 'Nation of Nations' has grown from the hope and seeking of men from all nations and races on this earth," can we achieve "a world that is fit to be the home of man."

Brushing aside what he termed "the scurrying timidity with which some Senators turned the Nation away from the American dream," Daniels declared that "America does have a special meaning for the whole world in United Nations terms."

"Some of us may not be ready now to choose any such partnership of peoples for peace and decency as the United Nations must mean," he said, but "we can at least begin to undertand that this war, even through victory, moves us irresistibly toward decency or disaster."

No Longer Fearful

Although in this country "there are men who speak in evil prejudice which soils our cause and threatens to degrade our victory," Daniels declared, "we Americans are no longer fearful in this war." We have before us the vision of a "new frontier" for all the world, "for security on the earth grown straight out of the same seeking which led America," he concluded.

Mr. Daniels is the son of Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy in President Wilson's Cabinet during the last war. Accompanying him during last night's program were Mrs. Daniels and David Niles, aide to President Roosevelt.

The program was sponsored by the USO-Jewish Welfare Board and the Jewish Community Center. It brought to a close a film festival on the United Nations started 11 weeks ago, when Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Lord Halifax opened the series.

Pentagon Guard In Hospital After Fighting Blaze

Raymond V. George of 5415 Tilden Road, Decatur Heights, Md., a guard in the Public Buildings Administration, on duty in the Pentagon, is in Providence Hospital in a condition described as "fair," as the result of having been overcome by smoke resulting from a fire in a store room of the Pentagon building last night.

The origin of the fire is unknown, Army spokesmen said. Paper and cork insulation around the ventilation ducts in the room were burning. The fire was extinguished by guards and civilan employes.

The blaze, which occurred on the eighth and ninth corridors of the building on the river side, was discovered when guards smelled smoke and found the corridors filled with it. The fire was confined to 50 square feet of the storeroom.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Who Resigned Professional Job to Have Baby, Knowing Husband Might Be Drafted, Leaving Her To Cope Alone, Explains Her Satisfying Philosophy

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some time ago you discussed the problem of a young wife who had just returned to her job after a year's leave of absence, during which she had a baby. She was tired and discouraged, trying to combine the two jobs of homemaker and wage earner. Her only help on the "home front" was a younger sister, who had come from the country to look after the baby, but who disliked the city, had no training in housekeeping and resented corrective suggestions. This wife said that her husband was almost sure to be drafted, sooner or later, although his draft board had promised him he wouldn't be called for at least three months. And she asked you to advise her (a) whether to quit the job and take care of her home and baby, or (b) keep on working, in order to guarantee a living wage for herself and the child, in case her husband had to go to war. You told her to "apply herself with high-hearted determination to the definitely tough though manifestly feasible double job (of homemaking and breadwinning) for the duration."

Know Yourself, Make Your Choice, Accept Results

That woman's situation is almost identical with mine. And while I would not contradict your advice to her—since your advice seems always to be sound, and to be based quite as much on the special circumstances as on general principle—I would like to explain for her benefit, how I am meeting my problem. To begin with, perhaps I should say that ever since I have been able to make a choice sensible of both my personal needs and talents, I have believed that my role should be essentially that of homemaker with avocations. In addition, I have always felt that an individual—taking for granted he has the maturity to accept and wrestle with the consequences of his choice—should be brave enough to dare the course he really prefers, and take the bitter with the sweet.

On the basis of this philosophy, therefore, I took maternity leave from a professional position one year ago, a leave which stipulated my absence from work, not for months, but for years—and this was in the face of what I believed to be my husband's probable conscription into the army. Although a year has elapsed, I have as yet made no effort to find other employment. I am perfectly aware that dependency of wife and child will not keep my husband in a civilian capacity, and that my baby and I may be left to "make out" on an allowance of $62 a month. As it is, we are practicing strict frugality, from financial necessity, and yet I feel that each day's grace we are granted of being all together gives me that much more opportunity to create the kind of home life which is my best contribution to family and country.

A Good Conscience Lightens Hardship

Being only myself, the person I am—and not another woman of greater capabilities—I know that if I were to try to be homemaker and wage earner at the same time it would be an example of poor execution of duty in both jobs. If I were holding two jobs I could never give my husband the brand of companionship I can give him today, which we both agree is making a happy marriage. Nor could I give my child, during the early formative stage of his life, the kind of care that makes for sound body and nerves. Indeed, I feel that if I were trying to do both jobs I could not even partially give to my family that spiritual, mental, morale-building support that only the full-time wife and mother can give. I think the parable about man's inability to serve two masters, without coming to grief, tells the story.

However, should my husband be called into the service, or should Fate decree that he lose his earning power and become dependent upon me, I shall feel satisfied to undertake the "manifestly tough" double job you speak of, and do my very utmost to discharge it—because I shall be sustained by the comforting knowledge that I had previously made the most of a more favorable and congenial opportunity to do my very best by my family. I am already looking forward to the time when my husband may enter the army, and in the leisure I have I am trying to develop what I hope will be useful and marketable abilities, as insurance for the future. So this is my solution. Perhaps it will be of value to "K. T. M." and other wives in the same situation—if only as a sample of a satisfying day-to-day philosophy of living. Sincerely, FAITH.

Far Cry From Carrie Nation To Thirsty Working Girl

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In order to preserve my anonymity, I shall identify myself merely as one of the many men who have drawn the face on the barroom floor. During the past week I have been an interested follower of the Government girl revolt against "hen party" exclusion from certain night clubs and cocktail lounges after 9 p. m. And I find myself thinking: "It's a far cry from Carrie Nation to Government Girl—who wants to loaf around a bar all hours of the night!"

A predatory female on the rampage is not a pretty spectacle—whether she is a reformer or just a plain bum. And I would like to remind the nice little girls from the country, who might be led astray by this feminist rant, that a person is judged by the company he keeps. I have played night clubs all around the world and back, and I have never yet met an unescorted woman in a night club whom I would care to cultivate as a permanent companion—friend or wife.

Few Heroes in Bars, Outside Cowboy Movies

Any girl who goes to a night club or cocktail lounge in the pale hope of meeting a man—searching, that is, for a "pick-up" beau—had better think twice. Reality, sisters, is different from fiction. You don't find those strong, silent men in bars—outside of the cowboy movies. Any man with the price, the desire and time on his hands may enter a night club, and you will find an assorted line-up of time-killing characters there. My advice to these Government girls who are so grimly earnest about "wanting to have fun" would be to take stock of themselves and see why they don't get dates. Maybe if they were less hell-bent on patronizing night clubs—which looks to a man like the gold-digger racket—they might have more beaux on the string. With every good wish, respectfully yours, T. M. W.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

These Women!

By d'Alessio

"Look here, young lady, you'll just have to get up earlier in the morning!"

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Come the postwar era, will women find themselves jobless? Will Government and industry say to them, "Go back home, little girls, and take up your household duties? The war is over and again it's a man's world."

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

In order to answer these and many other puzzlers and to establish women's working status, industry, Government and colleges are putting their heads together in a two-day conference on war and postwar demands for trained personnel. Opening in the morning at the Mayflower Hotel, the conclave is under the auspices of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations.

"After World War I, women chemists were dismissed. In the depression days, married women and then other women were the first to go," explained Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, managing director of the institute. "No conscientious adviser in college even five years ago could have urged a girl who had to have a job on graduation to major in chemistry, physics or mathematics, for even in teaching, where women were predominant, these were men's fields. From 1920-39 it would have been absurd to encourage women to specialize in chemistry, except in very rare cases, as it was not possible to find jobs for them except occasionally as a librarian or secretary in an industrial laboratory. And as for engineering, that was only for the hardiest of hardy pioneers."

Questions Remain

While today the picture has changed, yet there are still the questions, "Will women be given consideration after the war, with equal opportunity to compete for jobs, or will the old rules of not employing women be revived? Will marriage be a bar to employment?" according to Mrs. Woodhouse.

A luncheon will be one of the highlights of the conference tomorrow. Mrs. Frederick H. Brookie, Madame Prochnik, Mrs. Lou E. Holland, Dean Eugenia Leonard, Mrs. Minna Adams, Miss Ann Taylor will be among those assisting Mrs. Jouett Shouse. William L. Batt will preside. Speakers include Ralph E. Flanders, president of Jones & Lemson Machine Co., and William B. Stout of the Stout Division, Consolidated Aircraft.

Joseph B. Eastman, Director of the Office of Defense Transportation, Admiral Emory S. Land, Dean George W. Case, Director of Office of Engineering Science and Management Training, and Dean Harold M. Crothers are among the notables who have sent in advance reservations. Mrs. Shouse, District 6630, is in charge of luncheon reservations.

Let the Hurricane Blow

BY MICHAEL TRENT

CHAPTER II

Laura Hanley, the nurse who had come on the transport with her, was lying on her cot with a magazine. Laura said, "Are you mooning over the French doctor, darling?"

"He asked me to go into town with him this evening. I don't know whether I should."

Laura sat up. She wore pajamas that were unattractively mannish. She was a plain girl with dull blonde hair; she was an eager girl but her eagerness always seemed frustrated, and her romances were always experienced through reading love story magazines. Laura's eyes were suddenly bright.

"I'd know, if it were me," she said. "He's nice, and he's different. What have you against him?"

"I guess I judge him by someone I once knew," Ruth told her. "But I suppose that someone was — different. Would you really go if you were me?"

"With bells on," Laura said.

San Marcos had an ancient and poverty-stricken look. Its buildings were white in the sun but their walls were ramshackle, cracked and peeling, and even the old Spanish architecture had last its appeal. But now, by night, as their rickety old taxi rolled along the main street, San Marcos had a vague charm. The houses had balconies and grilled windows and carved doors. In midtown there were a few doors. In midtown there were a few neon signs, bright against the darkness, and the shop windows glowed. The natives wore white cotton, and everywhere on the streets soldiers stood idly as though not knowing how to while away their leisure. The taxi stopped before a building whose neon sign read, "Casa Valencia."

As they entered the Casa Valencia, Dr. Cartier said, "I apologize for bringing you to this shoddy place, mademoiselle. If it were Paris, I should do better by you."

"Let's pretend it is Paris," Ruth said. "Say, a few years from now."

"That is a good idea," he replied. "We shall drink champagne to it."

They were shown to their table by a waiter, and Dr. Cartier ordered the champagne. He said, "You are looking for ladies, of course. But here most of the families are of Spanish descent and they have the old ideas. They do not bring their women to public places."

"It will be hard to pretend this is anything but San Marcos, won't it, Dr. Cartier?"

"Perhaps. But we shall try." He was smiling at her, and tonight his smile was real. "Shall we dance? Dancing does away with reality."

Ruth smiled and nodded, and they rose and went to the small dance floor. There were few couples dancing, but still the space was crowded. But, as Dr. Cartier had said, dancing does away with reality, and Ruth could forget the Casa's dinginess. She felt very gay.

"It pleases you?"

"Yes, Dr. Cartier," she said.

He smiled. "There are two things I wish," he said. "One is that you would call me Jean. The other is that you would like me." He spoke softly, whispering to her; it was as though he had fallen in love with her.

Now it was another weekend, a Sunday afternoon, and, atop High Point, Ruth and Dr. Cartier could look down upon most of the island and out across the blue Caribbean. A winding path led up the hill, and they pushed their rented bicycles, it was so steep. Behind them were the crumbling ruins of the old Spanish fort. A group of soldiers prowled about the ruins taking pictures.

Dr. Cartier said, "You Americans are always busy—always doing something even in your leisure time."

"It's a trait we have, Jean," Ruth told him. "Maybe it's because we're restless."

They had brought a picnic lunch. They sat by a table cover spread in the shade of a cluster of palm trees. The sun was bright, glaring, but there it was cool. They could see the town sprawled along the harbor, and beyond was the air base. Farther on there were cane fields, and then the jungle-like interior.

"When first I saw this island," Dr. Cartier said, "I thought it a wretched place. I saw it from a tramp freighter, and it seemed a haven for a lost man. But now—" He smiled at Ruth. "—now it seems a paradise. You have made it that for me."

"It's lovely here, Jean. So peaceful."

"One would think the world was a pleasant place."

"It was," she said. "It will be again."

"I thought, coming here," Dr. Cartier said, "that there was nothing more for me—no future, no life at all. I know better now."

"You mustn't ever lose hope."

"You don't know, Ruth . . . You really don't know."

It was bad, Jean?"

He put his hand across his eyes. "It was worse than bad," he said. "My regiment was surrounded, but the Medical Corps escaped. We fled, terror snapping at our heels. The planes—they bombed and strafed us. But worst of all, we knew France had fallen. I managed to reach my home. It had been destroyed. My wife—my wife was dead. We had had but a few weeks together."

"I'm sorry, Jean," Ruth said, knowing how inadequate the words were. "I did not know it was like that."

He lowered his hands and looked at her. "I never spoke of it to anyone," he told her. "But somehow it helps to tell you."

It did not seem to relieve the long-suffered pressure in him. Now that he had spoken his nerves seemed to ease, and he seemed much less a drawn steel spring. He said, "I spoil your picnic, Ruth."

"Oh, no, Jean. I'm pleased you like me so much."

"I more than like you, my dear, but I have no right to say that."

"It's that we understand each other."

"That is important, isn't it?" he asked. "I mean between a man and a woman. Understanding. It isn't knowledge—it's understanding."

He reached out and took her hands, held them tightly, and it was then that Ruth knew it had happened. She was in love with Jean, she who had sworn long ago never to have any feeling for any man. But Steve, and Steve's hurt, was no longer real. Jean had eased that pain.

Jean drew her to him. He kissed her. He whispered to her in French. She did not understand his words, but his meaning was quite clear. He loved her.

"I have nothing now," he said. "But one day I shall be a whole man again, a good doctor. Then I shall say, 'Ruth, I want you to honor me by becoming my life.' Shall we—pray that that day is not too far off?"

Ruth smiled through a mist of tears. "Yes, Jean . . . you and I shall pray for that." She was happy in a strange, sad way.

THE GENTLER SEX

When City Girls Get Down on the Farm

By Malvina Lindsay

American women soon will face one of their severest wartime testings. It will be in their call back to the farm.

The old song, "How You Gonna Keep 'Em Down on the Farm After They've Seen Paree?" which was popular after the last war, is particularly applicable now. American women eligible for the United States Crop Corps, may not have seen "Paree," but they have seen New York or Chicago, or Washington, or Terre Haute, or whatever is their nearest metropolis, and they have liked it—liked it so well that in most instances they have stuck to it. The trend of population for the last 25 years has been toward the cities, and women have strongly influenced that trend. They have liked the conveniences and contacts city life has afforded, and they have especially liked its definite hours of work and its monetary rewards.

Now they are being asked to leave that life and go back to picking strawberries, weeding onions, milking cows, cutting hay and even plowing. For it is not farm women who are needed for the Army. They are already at work in the cattle barns and in the fields doing the tasks of their absent sons and husbands. It is the city dwellers who must be depended upon to take up the slack in farm labor and save the crops.

Farmers Say Women Can't Take It

True, farmers don't look on this idea with enthusiasm. They have no faith that any city "gal" can take it. They want dependable farm laborers, husky work-toughened fellows who can really turn out a man's day of labor. But even with draft deferments, there still are not enough farm laborers to harvest the crops. No matter how much the farmers and farmers' wives may pooh-pooh the city workers, there is no escaping their dependence on these green recruits.

In fact, a lot of their harvesting is going to be done not only by regular trained members of the Crops Corps, but by the "Victory Vacationers"—city women who will volunteer to spend their vacations as emergency harvest hands. The main call for their help will be from the latter part of August to the first frost of October, though there will be some fruit harvesting in late May and in June.

How will city women meet this call? For city workers to give over their dearly prized and much-needed vacations to farm work is truly a patriotic sacrifice. But there will be many who will volunteer to make it. The greater problem will be to find those who will stick, who can stand up to the rigors of the service.

When this Nation's land army gets into action, much adjustment between city and farm viewpoints will be needed. City women will have to be gradually toughened up to a more primitive life than many of them have known. Farm people will have to show patience and forbearance with their tenderfeet employes, who will only be able to hoe a few rows of tomatoes a day to a farmhand's quarter of an acre. However futile the city volunteers may appear at first, it must be remembered that England's land army of 60,000 women has proved what women can do agriculturally once they get trained.

Hard Going For City Tenderfeet

It's going to be hard on the city girls those first few days on the farm. Their muscles will ache and their hands get grubby. They will sweat and get sunburnt and find their permanent waves wet and stringy. They will be lonely and homesick for the clang of street cars, the whir of motors, the glow of city lights and the surge of crowds. But they're going to learn what it means to be truly and healthily hungry. They're going to use muscles they never knew they possessed, and they will harden and trim down flabby hips and midriffs. They're going to find themselves relaxed and free from mental strain, and comforted and calmed by their daily contact with sun and soil. They're going to have the exaltation of doing something concrete for others, of helping to feed their fighting men and hungry people everywhere.

It's going to be hard on the farm folk having to put up with the awkwardness and the slowness and the softness and the fussiness of the city workers. But its going to be company, too, and a change and a stimulation, and what's more, a lot of help.

And out of it all, who knows but that another social barrier in American life will be broken down, and the city and the farm folk will be brought closer together, no longer disdainful or resentful of one another, but bound together by the ties of understanding that make a Nation unified and a world peaceful?

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

If you are looking for a one-dish meal, consider the stew. Now that the days are cool, a delicious stew will be sure to hit the spot. This is a food that answers more than one need. It takes but little meat, is full of vitamins and minerals, and saves considerable time. An important saving is precious meat points.

If you want to make a lamb stew, buy 1½ pounds of breast of lamb. This meat takes but 3 points per pound. Have the butcher cut the meat into squares of 1½ inches, or you can do it yourself. The rest of the procedure is simple. Here is a recipe for making the stew.

LAMB BREAST STEW

Flour lamb pieces lightly and place in a heavy stew kettle or frying pan with 2 tablespoons fat or meat drippings. Let brown lightly on all sides for 15 minutes. Add 3 cups water, 1 onion, a sliver of garlic if desired, 2½ teaspoons salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Cover closely and simmer for 1½ hours. Add 4 small whole potatoes, 4 small carrots and cook until vegetables are done. Ten minutes before the potatoes and carrots are done add 1 small head of cabbage, taken apart by leaves. Serves 4.

What to serve with the stew? Precious little; bread, dessert and beverage. Perhaps the following suggestion would help.

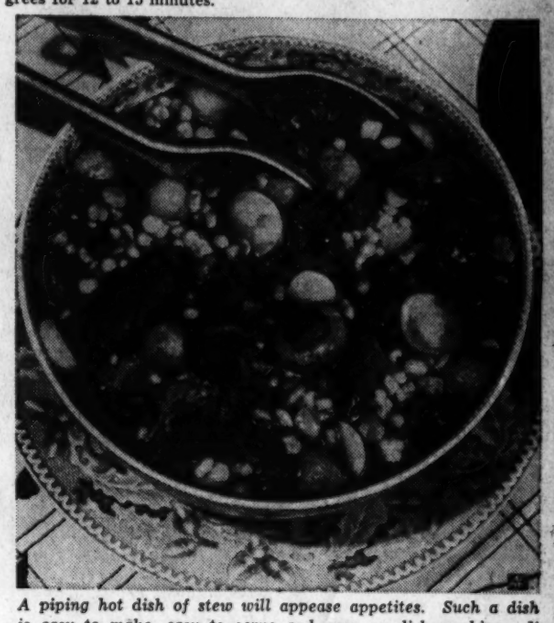
LAMB BREAST STEW
Corn Bread Butter or Margarine
Fresh Fruit Compote
Oatmeal Cookies Tea

Here is a recipe for making ration cookies. This recipe makes use of melted bacon fat as the shortening.

RATION OATMEAL COOKIES

Sift 2 cups all-purpose flour, measure and sift again with 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon nutmeg and 1 teaspoon salt. Add ½ cup chopped nuts, ½ cup chopped dates and ¾ cup seedless raisins. Dissolve 1 teaspoon soda in 6 tablespoons milk. Beat 2 eggs and add 1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed, 1 cup melted bacon fat, the sifted dry ingredients, milk and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Add 2 cups uncooked, quick or regular rolled oats. Mix thoroughly and drop from teaspoon on buttered baking sheet and bake in moderately hot oven, 375 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes.



A piping hot dish of stew will appease appetites. Such a dish is easy to make, easy to serve and easy on dish washing. It has further recommendations because of its good nutrition.

Don't Lose Your Head

By Grace Martin
Associated Press Feature Writer

Have you ever thought how many possibilities for discourtesy your head offers—aside from the words you speak?

Take the way your hair looks. If you go around with it in curlers half the time, or if it presents a disheveled appearance because you have not brushed and combed it properly, you are indulging in discourtesy as well as slovenliness.

Or if you go to the other extreme and are constantly patting and fussing with your hair, you get on your friends' nerves.

Consider your hats, too. If you persist in wearing zany ones which look as though they were about to take off for the soup plate and which attract all eyes, your husband will be acutely uncomfortable.

And the male does not breathe who will like it, if you keep turning your head to look at other people in the restaurant, when he is telling you the story of his life—or even when he is not telling you any story at all.

Do you nod your head while other people talk, screw your face into unseemly knots as you talk or follow any other nervous head habit? Better check up on yourself and see. Your head is supposed to house a brain.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The conflicts a mother inspires when a child will not go to sleep at the proper hour might well be avoided if the mother would convince herself that the child was no more eager to stay awake than she was to have him. He undoubtedly wants to sleep but for some reason, not always apparent, he cannot.

Ordinarily the well child, the child whose tummy is comfortably full, will sleep some after each meal. There will be a wakeful period just before the bath, one in the middle of the afternoon and again just before the 6 or 7 p. m. bottle. Other than this the child will sleep quietly the rest of the time.

When a nursing baby who has enjoyed good sleeping habits suddenly begins to wake up at night and demand to be nursed, one may as well decide that it is not a plea for more amusement but a clear indication of the need for weaning.

The 10-month-old baby (this is your baby, Mrs. G. S.) who cannot be put to sleep until 10 p. m. or later is showing as plainly as he could with words that he hasn't enough to eat.

The way to enrich his diet now is to wean him from the breast. This ceremony should begin at the ninth month, or earlier. But at 10 months you would be an unusual mother, indeed, if you could provide adequate nutrition for your baby.

Often weaning may have to be started several months earlier. Holding off and continuing to nurse the baby not only courts undernourishment but establishes such a fixed habit of nursing that the baby, despite his undernourishment, is reluctant to accept a bottle or cup. This complicates the procedure unnecessarily.

Since the boy is now confirmed in his repudiation of a cup, wean temporarily to a bottle. The transition is not so drastic a one. Start with one bottle daily, offering this instead of the 2 p. m. nursing. Next substitute a bottle for a 10 a. m. nursing, then the 6 a. m. one and finally the last 6 p. m. nursing. By the time this feeding is reached, in from two to four weeks, your breast supply will be so limited that the baby will be pleasingly satisfied with the contents of the bottle. It remains for you to determine to carry this through successfully and then you will rise above temporary difficulties.

RATION POINTS

New Spice Restrictions — Reductions in the quotas of black pepper, cinnamon, cloves, ginger, mace, nutmeg, allspice and white pepper are now in effect. Black pepper has been reduced from a previous quota of 90 per cent to 45 per cent. Cinnamon has been reduced from 50 per cent to 30 per cent.

The subtle use of spices raises many a bland food to savoriness. A heavy hand with spices results in obscuring the natural flavor of the dish. To assure their continued absence from the ration list the careful use of spices is to be considered.

Homemakers are urged to conserve spices by stringent use and proper care. Spices must be kept covered and stored in a dry place to retain their proper strength.

Trujillo's Daughter To Come Here

New member of the Dominican Embassy staff who will be in Washington in a week or so is Senorita Flor De Oro Trujillo, daughter of Gen. Rafael Trujillo, President of the Dominican Republic.

First woman member of the Dominican diplomatic corps, Senorita Trujillo has been named first secretary of the embassy. "I want to learn all I can about the women of the United States," she said on being interviewed in Miami, Fla., yesterday, "so I can introduce American customs into my own country."

A frequent visitor here, the Dominican President's daughter had been living in this country for two years when she was the wife of Capt. Maurice Berck, who died recently in Washington. She returned to her homeland about a month ago.

Senorita Trujillo will leave Florida today or tomorrow to spend several days in New York before coming to Washington. Once settled here, she intends to take up the study of international law. Educated abroad, she speaks four languages in addition to Spanish. They are Portuguese, German, French and English.

"This is a big chance my father has given me," she further declared yesterday, "and I am going to study hard so that I will not disappoint him."

Gen., Mrs. Pope to Be Guests at Dance

Maj. Gen. Maurice A. Pope, head of the Canadian Joint Staff Mission in Washington, and Mrs. Pope will be guests of honor at the weekly dance of the Officers' Service Club on Saturday evening at the Mayflower Hotel to be held in the Sapphire Room at 9 o'clock.

General and Mrs. Pope will be entertained at dinner beforehand by Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins.

Entertainment Is All Centered On Man in Uniform, Her Belief

By Elizabeth Henney

"When 'services to the service' begin to discriminate against women officers in United States service—it's high time somebody did something about it!"

A WAAC officer, who earnestly desires not to be identified in this piece, was talking . . . bitterly. Her own experience of six months in Washington had led her to believe that while the Capital is turning itself inside out to entertain men in uniform—officers and privates—women officers are being overlooked in a big and bothersome way.

"I've been here six months," she said, "and I haven't yet had a chance to meet anybody socially. While all this effort is being put forth to entertain men in uniform, why not a little attention to us women?"

Why not, indeed? That is what a lot of persons might like to know; and so, in an effort to find out just where, how and why these "discriminations" are taking place, a poll of "services to the service" has been started. Here are some of the results. More will follow.

The USO organizations, which are set up according to War Department specifications for the aid and entertainment of enlisted personnel only, have already made arrangements to assist the women in the services. They are opening very shortly a Service Women's Club at 1911 H Street, and the National Catholic Welfare Council Girls Club at 1814 N Street has already set aside certain nights for the use of the women in service.

Selected Hostesses May Be Partners

As for dances, according to the rules of the USO, neither male nor female enlisted personnel may bring their own dates to the dances, though both are welcome and there are a certain number of selected hostesses available as partners.

Next on the list was the Officers Club at the Burlington Hotel, where Mrs. James Clement Dunn emphasized that the facilities of the housing department and the clubrooms are available to WAACS, WAVES, SPARS and Marine Reserves, and they are as welcome as the officers. By housing facilities is meant the registry that attempts to find housing (apartments, rooms, etc.) for those officers stationed here.

However, when it comes to the dances, said Mrs. Dunn, while the women officers are welcome to come stag or with officers as escorts, they cannot bring their own escorts if the gentleman in the case be not in uniform; though officers are privileged to bring dates, whether or not they be in uniform. When the discrimination was pointed out, Mrs. Dunn parried by saying it would be too hard to keep track of the men who weren't in uniform, even though couples were all checked at the door when they arrived.

Women Officers Welcome at Club

The Officers' Club at 1400 New Hampshire Avenue, however, held a different view on that matter. Franklin R. Adams, manager of the club, said women officers were as eligible as men to be members of the club, were welcomed into the dining room lounge and bar, and are more than welcome at the Saturday night dances, indeed urged to come.

As to the question of partners, Mr. Adams replied that anyone, male or female, who had the mental equipment of the caliber of officers could be relied upon to select suitable and presentable companions for a club dance.

He welcomed the opportunity to say that the club is delighted to accept women officers for membership upon their own application and explained the background of the club as a further invitation to membership for those eligible.

Formed during the last war as a nonprofit organization known as the United Service Club of America, it was organized by a group of officers including Admiral J. E. Schofield, Maj. G y Withers, Maj. L. B. Schuette and Colonel Stockdale.

At the end of that war the club naturally disbanded and any bank balance left was untouched because it was not legally possible to use it for other than club purposes. When this war started, the original organizers looked up their bank balance for the organization, found it to be well over $6000, and immediately organized a new Officers Club of America, which now has its headquarters on New Hampshire Avenue, and is also self-supporting and nonprofit-making.

The dues, it is understood, are $3 a month for resident members (those living within a radius of 50 miles around the District), and for nonresident members it is $3 a year. So you WAAC and WAVE officers who want a club of your own, here is one anyway that will welcome you with open arms.

Wife of New York Representative Moves "Back Home" Today, but Business—Not Political Fence Building—Prompts Shift; Says She's 'Born Commuter' Anyway

One of the surest signs of spring in Washington is the steady exodus of congressional wives, headed homeward for the season. Time was—when you couldn't find more than a handful of Senate and House hostesses here by the beginning of May.

This year, even though Congress will probably have little or no vacation, numerous wives of members already are laying plans to get back to the home front. With election year just around the corner, political fence building is in order—and no mistake about it; and if the candidate for reelection can't get home to take over, the little woman will have to do double duty while the doing's good.

All of which has no connection with the reason one of the most attractive wives in the congressional contingent will leave today for her home in St. Albans, Queens County, N. Y., with no expectation of moving back until next winter.

Mrs. William B. Barry, wife of the New York Representative, and their son, Brian

A Pretty 'Portia,' and an Able One

Fact of the matter is, it's business—entirely extrapolitical—that prompted Mrs. William B. Barry, wife of Representative Barry, to give up their apartment here and return to their New York home with their 5-year-old daughter, Jane, and 3-year-old son, Brian.

Like her husband, Mrs. Barry is a full-fledged lawyer; and this time of year the volume of business in their Jamaica and Wall Street offices gets so heavy she feels she had better get closer to the home base.

"Of course, it doesn't make too much difference," she said, with a smile. "When I'm working in New York there's always a lot of business to bring me back to Washington; and when I'm here, I have to spend a lot of time on the train to keep the calendar going there."

Just another "born commuter" is what she considers herself . . . but she wouldn't change her job with anybody else in the world. As pretty a Portia as I've ever seen, Mrs. Barry stacks up on just about any account you can mention. She's friendly, unaffected, and dynamic . . . and, what's even more important, she has a mind of her own and expresses her opinions as freely as if she weren't a politician's wife. She has an exceptionally wide range of interests; can talk well on just about any subject you can mention, but is not one to monopolize conversation or to make a legal case of every potential argument.

Tells Why She Continues Career

Her reasons for continuing her career, even after marriage . . . and motherhood? Well, in the first place, she was trained for the law, and she likes being a lawyer because she believes she has more to contribute in that field than in a purely domestic existence. In other words, she'd a lot rather help straighten out the snarls in other persons' lives than spend most of her own at a bridge or tea table. She feels now is the time for every good woman to come to the aid of her country . . . and she is convinced the very best way to do that is to swing into the job she is trained to do.

There's another reason, too. Just as numerous "war widows" are carrying on their husbands' work during the emergency, she feels that she should keep the Barry & Barry law offices going until the time when her husband chooses to retire from his job as a public servant and resume full-time work, once more, in the legal profession.

"I've seen too many persons try to stay on a Government payroll when they couldn't make a living any other way," she said. "In that case, serving the public ceases to be a contribution; is more like receiving a pension. Any time my husband leaves Congress, he will aways have another profession awaiting him."

Just another way of keeping the home—or office—fires burning.

Mrs. Wm. Calhoun Anticipates Return to Her Peking Residence

Wife of Former Minister to China Is Widely Feted by Friends During Visit in Washington

Her fabulous palace in Peking, where the official great of the world used to gather, is now barracking three Jap officers, but Mrs. William James Calhoun is looking forward to the day when she will return to China and once again become chatelaine of her magnificent converted temple.

In Washington for a few weeks' stay at the Statler, this "Dowager Duchess of Peking" is en route to her home in Chicago, after spending most of the winter in New York. A frequent visitor to Washington since her return from China a few months before Pearl Harbor, Mrs. Calhoun is kept busy by her Capital friends with a whirl of parties. Among the many fetes planned in her honor is the dinner at which the commandant of the Marine Corps, Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and Mrs. Holcomb, will be hosts tomorrow night.

Her husband, before his death, was the American Minister to China from 1909 to 1913, and although she returned to the United States after his tour of duty there, she thought of Peking as her home. She returned to the Far East in the middle '20's prepared to stay. With the kind of ingenuity that it takes to solve a Washington housing problem, Mrs. Calhoun found an old, deserted Chinese temple near Peking. After redecorating it, she moved in, and this lacquer-columned, lavishly furnished residence became the social mecca for prominent Americans.

The former Lucy Monroe of Chicago, Mrs. Calhoun is a sister of the late Harriet Monroe, famous poet, who was founder, editor and financial godmother of the magazine Poetry. While awaiting the moment when she can again sail to Peking, Mrs. Calhoun is giving her time and energies to relief activities of all kinds.

Choose Sculptex "Carved" Wool Broadloom Carpeting

Not actually carved, of course—the effect is the result of eliminating certain yarn-threads in the weaving. Best of all, this lack of threads in the pattern means that the "carved" effect will last as long as the carpet itself. Particularly smart as a wall-to-wall floorcovering in modern rooms, though Sculptex need not be confined to any particular period. Five colors: green, rose quartz, blonde beige, acadia blue, praire rose.

Dedication Planned Tuesday For Jefferson Memorial

Dedication of the three million dollar Thomas Jefferson Memorial at the Tidal Basin on Tuesday will highlight observances of Jefferson's bicentennial at five focal points in this area.

The dedicatory ceremonies, scheduled for 12 noon, will be preceded by a concert at 11:30 a. m. by the Marine Corps Band, under the direction of Capt. William F. Santelman. Participants in the exercises at the memorial have not been announced but Stuart T. Gibboney, chairman of the Memorial Commission, is expected to preside.

The engrossed copy of the Declaration of Independence will be removed from its secret repository for exhibition and far a few days afterwards. United States Marines will maintain a 24-hour guard.

Annaual services in honor of Jefferson's birth will be held that afternoon at 3 at his grave in Monticello, where John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, will preside.

Ceremonies at Grave

Principal address at the grave will be given by Dr. Charles A. Beard, educator and author, who will also speak at the morning Founders' Day celebration at the University of Virginia. Floral tributes from organizations throughout the country will, according to custom, be placed at the grave.

A bicentennial exhibition will open at the National Gallery of Art and continue through Thursday, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. Open to the public will be a display comprised of portraits of Jefferson and his contemporaries, photographs of buildings designed by the former President, and several original drawings done by Jefferson during his career as an architect.

The Library of Congress will conduct a series of special programs and exhibits in honor of Jefferson throughout the week as well as on the date of the bicentennial.

Opening observances in the library will be a special performance of Sidney Kingsley's "The Patriots," a play about Jefferson, on Sunday at 8:15 p. m. in the Coolidge Auditorium before an official audience of Congressmen and Government heads.

Jefferson's Music

On Jefferson's birthday, Tuesday, an oration by Justice Felix Frankfurter of the United States Supreme Court will be broadcast from the auditorium over N. B. C. at 4:30 p. m. The program will begin at 4 p. m. with a concert of music from Jefferson's library by the Budapest String Quartet. Admission will be by invitation only.

Distinguished students of world affairs and authorities on Jefferson will participate in a symposium in Whittall Pavillion on Tuesday morning, when the importance of Jefferson's ideas and ideals in today's world will be discussed.

Librarian Archibald MacLeish will read the Declaration of Independence at informal ceremonies, at the rotunda on Monday at 4 p. m., opening the nine exhibitions which will be on display in the library throughout the week.

The collection of exhibits will illustrate Jefferson's many activities: as patriot, statesman, farmer, inventor, musician, lawyer, diplomat, scientist and map maker.

Part in Declaration

Most outstanding exhibit will show Jefferson's part in the drafting of the Declaration of Independence and will include all the original drafts of the declaration and many of the copies and miscellaneous material relative to its composition.

Another exhibit, devoted to Jefferson and the Library of Congress, will show his part in founding the library and the role he played in its development. Books from Jefferson's own library will comprise still another display.

On the memorial commission, under Chairman Gibboney, are Senators Andrews, McNary and Thomas; Representatives Culkin, Lanham and Smith; Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, Brig. Gen. Jefferson Randolph Kean, Fiske Kimball, Dr. George J. Ryan and Joseph P. Tumulty.

Celebrations throughout the country will be under the direction of the U. S. Bicentennial Commission, of which Senator Glass of Virginia is chairman.

G. O. P. Urged to Aid World Cooperation

Indianapolis, April 7 (AP).—Booth Tarkington, the Indiana author, said today he believes the Republican Party "must declare for international cooperation" and that failure to do so "would risk the whole of what might be called the intelligent vote."

Tarkington's views were contained in a statement read to a meeting of the newly formed postwar policies council of Indiana Republicans, which adopted a resolution in line with the author's statement.

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

These two important steps may help you to overcome
Sour Stomach Jerky Nerves
Loss of Appetite Underweight
Digestive Complaints Weakness
Poor Complexion

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its proper functions and balance. Undigested food places a tax on the system... insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need!

SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up blood strength when deficient ...and to promote those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue.

These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat . . . to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality . . . pep . . . become animated . . . more attractive!

Victory Builders

Playground Fitness Test Called 'Swell'

No official statements are ready yet on how the new Victory Builders program of physical fitness and community tests on District playgrounds is turning out. But the youngsters on ten playgrounds where the tests began the first of this week think the whole idea is "pretty swell" and said so yesterday.

All of the prospective Victory Builders are in favor of having the things they can do as young American citizens—such as helping with Victory Gardens, assisting busy playground directors and acting as Junior Air Raid Wardens—recognized in a really official way, according to a group at Columbia Playground yesterday.

When a test is passed, the young Victory Builder may wear the round blue emblem with a gold V and red star. As successively harder tests are passed, a white and then a blue star is superimposed on the red one.

This all-'round program, an innovation with the Recreation Department, is being watched with interest in other parts of the country as a possible example to follow in allying physical fitness and community service programs, Mrs. Clarice O. Smith, District director of neighborhood centers, pointed out yesterday.

Victory Builders start with the 9-year-olds and work up to tests for men and women, "minimum age 16." The aim is to harden up the "softies." If you're doubtful, here is part of the test for men: Chin yourself six times, carry an adult 100 feet either straddle back or fireman's carry, hike 2½ miles and cook a nourishing meal; swim 50 yards; put in five hours in conditioning drills and participate in three sports.

The tests will continue on 10 sample playgrounds about 30 days. It is hoped they will be in full swing on a city-wide basis by the time the summer playground program begins, Mrs. Smith said. The test playgrounds are Georgetown, Park View, Rosedale, Jefferson, Anacostia, Cummell, Francis, Banneker, Giddings and Columbia.

Life's Anchors Emphasized

The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, sr., pastor of Fifteenth Street Christian Church, said yesterday that there are "four anchors which can keep the ship of life from going on the rocks."

Speaking at Southeast congregations' daily noonday Lenten services at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, Mr. Bowers described the "anchors" as: "Belief in man; belief in the fact that life is worth living; belief in the eternal validity of moral law, and belief in the boundless power of Christ's presence in the human soul."

The Rev. J. Lloyd Black, director of the Christian Church Council of Metropolitan Washington, speaks today at 12 p. m.

Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, spoke twice yesterday at Epiphany Episcopal Church, where he will be heard today and tomorrow at 12 p. m.

The Rev. William Pierpoint, pastor of the St. Paul Methodist Church, will address upper Sixteenth Street congregations' Lenten services today at 8 p. m. at Highlands Baptist Church, 5314 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Chevy Chase congregations will meet today at 8 p. m. at Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut Avenue and Jocelyn Street Northwest. The speaker will be Dr. Charles Lowry of the Episcopal Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

The Rev. M. Chandler Stith, pastor of Brookland Baptist Church, will address Federation of Churches-sponsored services today at 5:30 p. m. at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest.

4 Freedoms Center

A branch of the Four Freedoms Center, founded in Chicago last January by Dr. Frederick Kettner, will be dedicated tonight at the Hotel Dauphin in New York City. Organized to promote constructive postwar planning and cooperation among the United Nations, the Center will sponsor public meetings on Friday nights featuring prominent speakers.

Train Murder Jury Includes Eight Women

By the Associated Press

Albany, Oreg., April 7.—Thirteen jurors, eight women and five men, were tentatively accepted today in the murder trial of Robert E. Lee Folkes, 20, Los Angeles Negro dining car cook for the Pullman car slaying of a Navy officer's bride.

Testimony was expected to begin tomorrow.

Defense Attorney Leroy Lomax of Portland questioned almost every juryman on his racial feelings. He rejected several who were Southerners or said they had family connections in the South.

Folkes was indicted on a charge of slashing the throat of Mrs. Martha Virginia Brinson James, 21, Virginia-born bride of a Navy ensign as she lay in her berth—lower 13 on a train speeding toward California January 23.

All witnesses were excluded from the courtroom at the request of Lomax, who gave no reason for the action.

He made the request as the court opened before a crowd of 20 which overflowed the small trial room.

District Attorney Harlow Weinrich wanted to know if Lomax meant to exclude "defense witnesses, too."

"The defense will have no witnesses," Lomax answered. But later he arranged for another attorney to take his place if he should decide to take the witness stand himself.

Wilbur G. Brinson of Norfolk, father of the slain girl, arrived in Albany but was not present for the opening session. Also in town but absent from the courtroom was Ensign Richard F. James, who was in another section of the train when his bride of four months was killed.

Coal Operators Would Renew Contract

By the Associated Press

New York, April 7.—Contract negotiations between Appalachian soft coal mine owners and the United Mine Workers reached a climax today when Northern operators declared that a pact could not be consummated by further parleys for collective bargaining.

At the same time, the operators proposed that the present contract, which expired March 31 but was extended 30 days, be observed for the war's duration, subject to any Government-required changes.

But John L. Lewis, U. M. W. head, said at a general press conference, at which the operators disclosed the situation, that union negotiators had "indicated it was not necessary to put the proposal to a vote to insure our rejection of it."

Meantime, Edward R. Burke, head of the group of Southern Appalachian bituminous mine operators, meeting separately with the union, declared that the National War Labor Board would be asked by tomorrow to step into the dispute unless there was a change in the program.

Burke said that such a change would be the miners' inclination to agree to a motion made by the operators at the outset of the conferences a month ago that negotiations be shelved until 90 days after the war.

Chief demands by the union are for a $2-a-day basic wage boost for the Nation's 450,000 soft coal miners, an $8-a-day blanket minimum, unionization of minor bosses and pay for all time spent in the mines, including traveling time.

Lewis declared that the Northerners' proposal of today was "an arrogant and contemptuous gesture on the part of these opulent coal operators" and "an affront" to the intelligence of U. M. W. negotiators.

Charles O'Neil, head of the Northern operators, said no formal vote had been taken on the proposal, but that it would be discussed when the conference reconvened tomorrow morning.

Dr. John R. Steelman, United States Conciliation Service head who entered the parleys last week, commented that "enough has been said now to indicate that this conference is in rather a bad way at this time." He said "the parties do not mutually agree that negotiations for a settlement is possible," but added:

"As long as people sit around a table and look at each other and talk together there is hope."

Demands Changes

Taft Ready To Support Ball Plan

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio last night told a Nation-wide radio audience he would support a "properly modified" version of the so-called Ball resolution for creation of a council of the United Nations for planning the peace, and then listed five major objections to the measure now pending before a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Taft spoke on the same program with Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, who assailed the resolution as permitting "the formation of some supergovernment to which the United States would yield its sovereignty."

In a third radio address on the subject, Senator Wagner (Democrat) of New York, urged adoption of the resolution jointly sponsored by Senators Ball of Minnesota and Burton of Ohio (Republicans) and Hill of Alabama and Hatch of New Mexico (Democrats).

Would Help President

The resolution, said Wagner, a firm Administration supporter, would strengthen the hand of the President in exercise of his foreign policies and would say to the world, in effect, that:

"America intends to see through to a finish the fight for future peace as well as the fight for present victory."

Taft declared his "most serious objection" to the resolution to be "the tremendous power" it gives to President Roosevelt. Observing that the measure proposes that meetings of United Nations representatives be called to form a world organization with "specific" powers, the Senator remarked:

"Now it is proposed that we give to him (Mr. Roosevelt) carte blanche to enter any kind of League of Nations and write the terms himself. If any resolution is adopted, it should be made perfectly clear that no agreement with other United Nations, for the formation of an organization of the United Nations or otherwise, can be entered into except by treaty subject to Senate ratification."

Senator Wheeler pointed out that soldiers returning from war and their families will be "the most powerful group, politically and psychologically in this Nation." He asked:

Soldiers to Be Strong

"What right have we got to make these boys a part of an international police force (which is proposed in the resolution)—controlled and ordered around by a new superinternational government made up of Russians, Chinese, British and Americans?"

Wheeler declared:

"Any attempt to create coercive machinery out of the materials of international relations, by which some states would be judges, mentors, or controllers of other nations, whether it is called 'collective security' or by any other name, is a technique of war and potential war—which in itself impedes the possibility of any useful cooperation."

"In the discussion of the Senate plan to win the peace," said Senator Wagner, "a few die-hard isolationists have rallied to a new version of their old slogans—'cooperation without commitments.' In our own history, that slogan takes us back to the Articles of Confederation, before a binding Union was formed under the Constitution of the United States. In the international sphere, that slogan means the same old policy that failed so miserably in the years between two world wars—the policy of polite conversations and good intentions without the effective united force to stop aggression."

McCarran Bill Discussions Are Postponed

At the request of Senator Glass (Democrat) of Virginia and Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, District Committee Chairman McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada has indefinitely postponed hearings on his bill to give the District police and transit jurisdiction over that section of Virginia on which Federal property is located.

Hearings were scheduled to begin yesterday afternoon, but Glass, who has been ill, wired that he is recovering and would like an opportunity to be heard on the question.

Next business before the District Committee will be discussion of insanitary conditions in Washington, scheduled for 11 a. m. Saturday. J. G. Sourwine, counsel for the committee, yesterday appealed for District physicians with large slum practices to appear before the committee to explain the effect of slum dwelling on the health of the District residents.

The Senate today is expected to discuss the overtime pay bill for Government employes after acting on a joint resolution to provide a supply and distribution of farm labor. Consideration of the pay bill has been delayed by discussion of the Bankhead bill.

Another Senate committee will swing into action today to consider District matters. An Agricultural subcommittee, of which Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota is chairman, will hold a hearing at 10 a. m. on commodity prices in the District. Under consideration is the spread between the farmer and the consumer. Nye asserts that the hearings have a national angle, since the spread shown in the District will be considered as indicative of that in other metropolitan areas.

New Super-Gas Patents Freed For All to Use

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., April 7.—Under a Federal court decree filed today, all gasoline manufacturers will be permitted to make a superfuel which the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey has announced can deliver 40 miles to the gallon in postwar automobiles.

Thirty-three giant production units now are built or building, each described by Standard as capable of turning out a perfect antiknock fuel at less than the cost of ordinary gasoline.

At Baltimore, meanwhile, the Glenn L. Martin Co. announced that it had granted the Government free license to one of its most lucrative patents, the Mareng cell—whose best-known use is in bullet-proof, self-sealing gasoline tanks for airplanes.

President Glenn L. Martin said the synthetic rubber fuel tank, which also has been used to turn box cars into tank cars for transporting oil and fuel, had been turned over to the Government for the duration of the war.

By Unit Operating

In the new gasoline-production development, one unit was placed in operation at Standard Oil's Bayway refinery, in nearby Linden, during January. It is a six million dollars fluid catalytic plant, a maze of pipes towering 20 stories into the air but requiring only nine men to operate it.

At present, three closely related wartime uses occupy the plants working under the new process; production of basic ingredients for 100-octane aviation gasoline, for synthetic rubber and for tri-nitrotoluol, the TNT that goes into high explosive shells.

When the plants turn to peacetime fuels, automobile engines will have to be redesigned to use them, Standard said. The new motors can be smaller and lighter, but deliver present horsepower.

The decree entered today is the latest step in antitrust litigation which the Justice Department launched against Standard Oil (New Jersey), parent company in the world-wide organization; Standard Oil of New Jersey, its biggest operating unit, and other subsidiaries.

Consent Judgment

Judge William F. Smith filed on March 25, 1942, a consent judgment requiring the defendants to license other manufacturers to use certain patents, primarily those involving the manufacture of synthetic rubber. As long as the war lasted, the court ruled, these licenses should be unrestricted and royalty free.

Last November the Standard Oil interests asked the court to clarify whether it might enter into negotiation with other companies for the use of its new fluid catalytic refining process, covered largely by the same patents involved in production of butadiene for rubber. The Government objected to any advance ruling on agreements as "purely hypothetical" and today's consent judgment was the outcome.

"Reasonable Royalty"

The supplementary decree specifies that the compulsory licensing provisions apply to the gasoline patents, but permit Standard to charge "a reasonable royalty rate" for their use. The Justice Department said this would permit small refiners to participate in the new low-cost process for making aviation gasoline and future motor fuels and in the manufacture of butadiene.

Except for the wartime lack of restraint on rubber licensing, the decrees run for the life of the patents.

Standard Oil (New Jersey) issued in New York a statement pointing out that construction of the 33 refining units had been proceeding under top priorities pending settlement of the license issue. "Some 16 companies" would operate them, the statement said.

It pointed out Standard would have the right to use in return patents which other companies might combine with its process to place Standard at a competitive disadvantage.

Martin Gas Tank

The Glenn L. Martin device for bullet-proofing gasoline tanks first was introduced shortly after Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, called for such an invention early in 1940.

The Mareng cell, whose name is a combination of "Martin engineering" was developed by Martin laboratory technicians under the direction of Reid B. Gray, chief of laboratories.

The cell can be shot through and through with heavy-caliber machine gun bullets, yet the wounds close up immediately without loss of gasoline.

Martin said his company granted the free license "in the interest of hastening victory." It is in keeping, he said, with the "spirit of the aircraft war production councils." Martin is president of the East Coast unit.

The councils were formed to exchange engineering and manufacturing experience and technique, trade secrets, materials, equipment and even personnel to speed war production of aircraft.

To Help in Winning War

"After thorough study, the Government recognizes the validity of the patents, and the free license is for the duration only, with full rights reverting to the company in the postwar peace period," Martin said. "But we must do everything now to win the war."

Formerly it was necessary to remove wings when a metal tank was damaged, but the Mareng cell, which was stuffed into wing apertures like a football bladder, could be pulled out and another substituted in a minor service operation.

Police Charts Help Reduce Accident Rate

Selective enforcement of District traffic regulations guided by weekly "spot" maps reduced motor vehicle accidents materially on "offending" streets this week, Accident Investigation Unit statistics disclosed yesterday.

K and Eighteenth Street Northwest, two streets which contributed a large percentage of mishaps to the toll of the week of March 21 have been free of accidents this week.

Two others, South Capitol Street and Nichols Avenue at Good Hope Road Southeast, each have had only one accident as compared with previous weeks when the total reached as many as six.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, chief of the Accident Investigation Unit, revealed that the weekly maps were established two weeks ago when it became apparent that monthly maps were inadequate for a worthwhile selective enforcement system.

Measures Explained

He explained the working of the maps and the enforcement measures as follows:

"Every accident reported to the police is 'spotted' on a map of the city. Each week the total is tabulated, showing locations, types of vehicles involved, cause of the collision and what, if any, traffic law was violated.

"When this has been done, each traffic officer is acquainted with the facts and instructed to exert every effort to curtail driving faults and violations on the streets where accidents occur.

"The motorcycle squads then are given particular beats to patrol—the offending locations—with orders to "crack down" on violations which are contributing to the accident rate."

"The past week has shown," Lieut. Liverman asserted, "that strict enforcement of regulations is one of the most effective means of combating highway casualty rates."

He produced a chart showing in detail the accidents reported during the weeks beginning March 21, and March 28. For the first period, 147 accidents were recorded, 10 of them with streetcars and 31 involving pedestrians. Twenty-one of the pedestrians' accidents were caused by the victims disregarding pedestrian regulations, he said.

"Very few instances were noted of excessive speed having caused the accidents," asserted the lieutenant. "Few accidents also were reported from outlying areas and residential sections."

During the week of March 28, 148 accidents occurred including four fatalities. Of the latter, two were jaywalkers.

Thirty-four pedestrian casualties were noted and 29 of them were attributed to pedestrian violations.

"Offending" streets during the week were listed as Florida Avenue between Rhode Island Avenue and Fifteenth Street Northwest, which led with 10 accidents; Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest between Seventh and Fifteenth Streets, seven accidents; Fourteenth Street Northwest, from Pennsylvania Avenue to K Street, six accidents.

Transit Firms Here Help War Industries

"the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."

And Nothing Can Be Done About It

THAT REMINDS ME OF THE TENDERFOOT WHO WENT INTO A FRONTIER TOWN RESTAURANT AND ORDERED A CUP OF COFFEE

"WE FOUND, IF WE DID, LIKE'S NOT SOME LOW BROW WOULD DRINK OUTA TH' SAUCER, AN' THAT AIN'T GOOD FER TRADE. THIS HERE IS A SWELL DUMP"
HOW SILLY! THE RESTAURANT COULDN'T HAVE BEEN SWELL WHEN THEY SERVED COFFEE WITHOUT A SAUCER

House Republicans Attack Army Ban on Political Activity

By the Associated Press

Republican Representatives attacked in the House yesterday the Army's restrictions on political activities of soldiers, with two of the speakers raising the question of its effect on consideration of Gen. Douglas MacArthur for the presidency.

Representative Fish (Republican) of New York, said:

"I do not know whether Gen. Douglas MacArthur would even consider the nomination for the presidency on the Republican ticket if offered to him, but I am quite sure that the executive department of the Government has no power whatever to dictate to the free people of America whom they should nominate and elect as President of the United States."

Seen as Fourth Term Aid

Representative Bennett (Republican) of Missouri declared the order eliminates MacArthur and promotes a fourth term for President Roosevelt. He urged that the President revoke the regulation.

"Why was this order not issued before the congressional elections if it is necessary to win the war?" Bennett asked. "Does the Administration regret election of Will Rogers, jr.?"

Rogers, a Democrat, was in the Army last year at the time he was elected to Congress from California to succeed Republican Leland Ford. He told friends he consented to run only with the understanding that he do no personal campaigning.

Inherent Right

Representative Kearney (Republican) of New York, said the order "disenfranchises men and women fighting to save America, while Fish observed:

"Under the Constitution every citizen is guaranteed the right to hold any public office to which the people may elect him. This is the inherent right of every American whether in the Army or out, or in time of peace or war."

The order was issued at the direction of Secretary of War Stimson, a Republican. It provides that "no member of the military forces on active duty will hereafter become a candidate for or seek or accept election to any public office not held by him when he entered upon active duty." MacArthur, while frequently mentioned in political speculation, last October said he had no "political ambitions whatsoever" and that the "only hope and ambition I have in the world is for victory for our cause in the war."

Dorothy Lamour Wed to Howard

North Hollywood, April 7 (INS).—Dorothy Lamour, sarong girl of the movies, and Capt. William Ross Howard 3d, Army Air Force officer from Baltimore, were on their honeymoon tonight following their marriage at the North Hollywood home of the actress' mother.

Only a few friends attended the wedding, which was private. The ceremony, performed by Capt. E. J. Carriker, chaplain at the San Bernardino, Calif., air base where Captain Howard is stationed, was held before the fireplace, which was banked with gladiolus, roses and blue iris.

Dr. R. C. Warfield Will Be Buried Today in Rockville

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at the funeral home of W. Reuben Pumphrey, Rockville, Md., for Dr. Robert C. Warfield. Burial will be in the Union Cemetery in Rockville.

Dr. Warfield, well-known retired dentist, died Tuesday night at his Rockville home of a heart ailment. He was 81 years old.

Dr. Warfield, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Israel G. Warfield, was born at Laytonsville, Md., and for the past 52 years had lived in Rockville, where he practiced his profession for nearly half a century until he retired several years ago. He was a director of the Montgomery County National Bank of Rockville, belonged to the Rockville Lodge of Masons, was an honorary member of the Rockville Rotary Club and for many years was active in the affairs of the Rockville Methodist Church.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Susan N. Warfield; three sons by a former marriage, Robert L. Warfield, Frederick, Md.; Comdr. C. Griffith Warfield, U. S. Navy, stationed at Moffett Field, Calif., and the Rev. Gaither P. Warfield, who recently returned from Poland, where he was for a long time in charge of Methodist missions; a brother, Elisha W. Warfield, New York, and two grandsons.

Grade Labeling Held Not Feasible at Present

The House Agricultural Committee yesterday voted its opinion that grade labeling should not be attempted for the 1943 canning season.

Although its members unanimously favor grade labeling, Chairman Fulmer of South Carolina said, they do not consider it could be feasibly handled during wartime.

"The packing industry has told us it could not be done under present manpower shortage conditions and the printing industry has told us it could not handle the printing that would be necessary," he told a room full of consumers present to testify and noisily expressing their viewpoints.

Boris Shiskin, economist for the A. F. of L., declared there was manpower sufficient to put the labeling into force immediately and read a statement from President William Green indorsing the idea.

"A myth has gained wide currency that grade labeling will displace standard brands on canned goods," Green's statement said. "Such, of course, is not the case. Grading in no way disturbs the use of brands. No honest canner fears or opposes the use of a Government grade on his products. No standard brand, if it is up to the standard, need fear proper grading of the contents of the can."

Other witnesses included Edna Van Horn, executive secretary of the American Home Economic Association, and Mrs. E. M. Nelson, District of Columbia housewife who headed a five-year study of can labeling.

During the study, Mrs. Nelson said, her group paid 14 cents a pound for grade A peas, 25 cents a pound for grade C peas and 13 cents a pound for substandard peas. "There was no relation between price and quality," she said.

Donald Montgomery, consumer counsel for the C. I. O., told Mr. Fulmer his organization will ask the OPA for a standard "one pack" that would eliminate all the "supposed grading" put into effect by the canners.

"We do not want to pay A prices until the product is grade A," he declared.

Present but not heard were representatives from the Washington League of Women Shoppers, the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, the District of Columbia Federation of Citizens Associations, the National Educational Association, and the Women's Auxiliary of the C. I. O. All declared they had come to ask for grade labeling—but Chairman Fulmer said the hearings had continued long enough, that the packers must have the problem settled "so they can know what to do."
